Layoffs clout forest industry

LIBRARY SHAMBLES at Lambrick junior high is surveyed by school maintenance employee Alf Lohr. Vandals caused an estimated $5,000 damage when they went on rampage at school. Police said 24 windows were shattered, the library and offices were vandalized and sections of the playing field were chewed up by a car. Intruder alarm went off about 2:30 a.m. but when police arrived, the vandals had fled. School board officials said clean-up and repair work will allow school to open Monday.

Nearly 3 times normal — unionists fear worst

Severe winter layoffs have hit the forest industry in the B.C. interior and on southern Vancouver Island things are just starting to pick up after a longer-than-usual Christmas holiday shutdown.

Clay Perry of the International Woodworkers of America headquarters in Vancouver, said as of New Year's Eve, 11,500 forestry workers had been hit by layoffs.

He said the average number of workers idled by seasonal layoffs in B.C. is about 4,000.

"It's much worse than we predicted before Christman," Perry said. "Unless something substantial is done it is going to get a hell of a lot worse."

He said mills which normally shut down for six weeks have been forced to close for 12 weeks or longer.

On Vancouver Island, the 5,000-member Duncan local appears to be worst-hit.

President Roger Stanyer said most of the sawmills in his area — covering the Malahat to Parksville — opened today but some 40 per cent of the local's members are still off the job.

The layoffs this winter started a week to 10 days earlier, around mid-December, and for some woodworkers there's no firm return-to-work date.

Few loggers are back at work, said Stanyer.

Victoria IWA president Roger Lewis, whose Local 118 covers north to the Malahat and out to Jordan River, said today about 700-800 forest workers of a total local membership of 1,800 are still off the job.

"Some of our people we understand may be going back next Monday," he said.

"Some of them were supposed to go back on the second while others will be going back on the seventh."

Victoria-area sawmills checked by the Times today were all back in production although Victoria Plywood Ltd., which laid off 200 employees Dec. 21, is still not back in production.

Last winter it started up again Jan. 15, and hired back a second shift Feb. 5. But this year there is still no definite start-up date.

"It's kind of in limbo at the moment," said a company spokesman. "It doesn't look too swift."

B.C. Forest Products Ltd. on the Gorge had a partial layoff of 270 people but will be starting full operations again on Monday.

"Most of the employees had holidays coming," said a company official today.

Plumper Bay Sawmills Ltd. closed on Dec. 20 but all 90 employees are now back on the job.

Out in Sooke, although the company has curtailed some operations, all 250 workers laid off before Christmas have now been called back.

Lewis estimates about 300 loggers in the Victoria local are still idle.

Meanwhile, IWA officials say the two-week-old B.C. Rail strike, which has sidetracked shipments of lumber, pulp, coal, potash and sulphur, has not yet contributed to the problem.

They blame high interest rates which have cut into the U.S. and Canadian housing markets, main consumer of finished lumber from Interior B.C. mills.

Gold zooms to $567

LONDON (AP) — Gold soared $43 to $567.50 a troy ounce ($652 Canadian) today in the biggest advance ever seen in a single day's trading. Silver price increased $8 an ounce.

The buying fever was attributed by dealers to the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan and the continuing Iranian crisis.

"There's no limit in sight," said one London dealer when gold hit $562. On Monday, before the New Year's holiday, gold had closed in London at $524.50.

Silver rose to a record $40 from $32 at Monday's close. "It's very, very difficult to see anything turning this market now — there's a distinct lack of sellers," said a dealer at Sharp Pixley Ltd. in London.

Gold analyst Brian Edgly of investment experts Bache Halsey Stuart Shields of London, said the price may hit $600 within the next few days. But he also cautioned that good news — about oil supplies or the U.S. embassy hostages in Iran — might cause a sharp setback in prices.

The Paris Stockbrokers' Association halted gold trading because of massive buying orders and virtually no sellers, which sent bids up to $565.80 an ounce. There is a government sales tax of four per cent on gold trading in France, which traders automatically add to gold prices. The government has proposed raising the tax to six per cent.

Australian bullion expert Ian Shannon predicted today that gold will reach $750 an ounce within three months, even with a settlement of the Iranian crisis.

"If it is solved by war then the price will assuredly jump," he said. "And, if there is a peaceful solution it will mean that Iran will then want to transfer its $10 billion worth of assets frozen by the United States into other currencies, at least to save face."

The U.S. dollar, meanwhile, sank against most currencies.

$622,000 accident award

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Calgary man left a quadraplegic after a diving accident last summer in the Okanagan has been awarded $622,000 for his injuries.

Mr. Justice H. E. Hutcheon of the B.C. Supreme Court overruled a jury's award of $11,000 made earlier in December.

The jury had decided that Terry LeBlanc, 28, who was suing the City of Penticton, was 95 per cent to blame in the accident, and assessed total liability at $225,000, meaning LeBlanc would receive only about $11,000.

LeBlanc broke his neck and severed his spinal cord when he dived off a raft in Skaha Lake last Aug. 4. The raft, about 100 metres offshore, was in water 1.5 metres deep.

Hutcheon ruled Wednesday that the city was 60 per cent responsible for the accident, and assessed $1,036,088 as total damages.

Man in custody, toll 43 after nightmare Que. fire

CHAPAIS, Que. (CP) — The death toll after a fire which turned a New Year's Eve party into a nightmare rose to 43 today after one of the 50 injured died in a Quebec City hospital.

Names of the victims were not released.

District Coroner Gilles Hudon said today that an inquiry, headed by Quebec fire commissioner Cyrille Delage, is to open Jan. 14, at the courthouse in nearby Chibougamau.

A provincial police spokesman said Florent Cantin, 21, a resident of this northern Quebec mining town, appeared before Delage in a closed session today in Chibougamau before being transferred to Orsainville provincial prison near Quebec City.

Cantin, held since Tuesday as a material witness, remained in custody on a coroner's warrant.

Corporal Yvon Martel, heading the police investigation, said Cantin was being moved for his own protection.

"Our jails in the district here are small, and some of the other prisoners might be revolted by him."

Delage, who flew in from Quebec City earlier today with provincial pathologist Richard Authier, then headed for Chapais to consult with municipal officials at the town hall, inspect the Opemiska Club — the scene of Canada's worst building fire in more than 40 years — and visit a temporary morgue set up in the town garage.

Most of the victims of the fire were found in a grotesque heap of charred bodies four feet high just inside one of the two rear exits to the hall where the crowd rushed after flames broke out near the front door.

Survivors said that at first the booming disco music made many of the 200 to 300 party-goers take the fire lightly.

But Sgt. Alfred Fillion of Quebec provincial police said six of the dead were found outside the hall. They were trampled to death as the fear-stricken crowd fought its way out of the smokey hall.

One indication of the mob panic was the discovery of scratch marks that Fillion said police found on the exit door and walls near the heap of bodies.

Girl dies in crash

A 17-year-old girl became Greater Victoria's first traffic fatality of the New Year early today.

Saanich police said Kathleen Ann Cameron of 2224 Edgelow died in Royal Jubilee Hospital at 2:20 a.m., 40 minutes after a jeep in which she was riding slammed into a light standard at McKenzie near Oakwinds.

A police spokesman said driver Philip Minns, 19, of 3385 Whittier, Cameron and another passenger, Steve de Girolamo, 21, of 4014 Cedarwood, were all thrown to the road.

Minns and de Girolamo are in fair condition in Jubilee with head, leg and internal injuries.

Last year 36 persons died in traffic mishaps in Greater Victoria.

U.S., allies look to UN for Afghanistan action

Times News Services

The United States and its five major Western allies have agreed in London to seek United Nations action as soon as possible against the Soviet Union's invasion of Afghanistan, which they characterized as "naked aggression."

After a hastily arranged, six-hour meeting here with senior diplomatic representatives of Britain, West Germany, France, Italy and Canada, U.S. Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher said they agreed to bring "this flagrant violation of international law" to the attention of the UN.

Diplomatic sources would not reveal, however, whether any of the other allies would join the United States in trying to provide emergency military aid to Pakistan, a possibility which has alarmed India. Nor would they say whether the allies discussed the possibility of aiding the Afghani Moslem rebels, many of whom are based just across the border in Pakistan.

Christopher, who flew here Sunday night for Monday's talks, left immediately afterwards for Brussels, where he planned to hold similar consultations with the rest of the NATO allies at an emergency session of the North Atlantic Council Tuesday.

Meanwhile, Soviet-installed Afghan leader Babrak Karmal warned today he would ask Russia for more military help to supplement the estimated 50,000 Soviet troops already in his country, Radio Kabul reported.

There were unconfirmed reports in New Delhi and Peshawar that Soviet soldiers battled Afghan opposition forces at a point about 96 kilometres from the Pakistani border.

The reports said the Soviets had secured the Afghan capital of Kabul and have moved out to secure the central Asian country's only major road network.

The reports also said the Soviet troops mortared and bombed major telegraphic switchboards and govern-

Marathon fever strikes Victorians of all ages

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY

About 200 Victorians, some bleary-eyed and tired-looking, wandered into the YM—YWCA auditorium New Year's Day to learn how to prepare for a marathon.

Husbands decked out in flashy new sneakers and Christmas-present track suits sat with their kids while senior citizens wondered how to stretch pension cheques to cover the costs of proper running gear.

Marathon fever has struck Victoria.

The big turn-out for the two-hour lecture on sports medicine that preceded the Y's annual fun run to Clover Point, delighted and surprised officials.

While the experts talked about nutrition, warmup exercises and selecting the right shoes, the $5 Royal Victoria Marathon training manual and official T-shirts were selling like hotcakes at the back of the room.

Officials said 200 manuals have been sold and they expect more sales once word of the Sept. 20 marathon spreads.

The marathon — Victoria's first officially sanctioned long-distance event — is being supported by the Victoria Times and radio station *VI*90*.

The object is to get as many people, not just athletes, involved as possible.

Organizers promise that anyone who follows the nine-month training program faithfully and attends the Sunday marathon clinics at the Y will be able to complete the 26 mile, 385 yard course that loops twice along the Victoria waterfront from Beacon Hill Park to Willows Beach.

Dr. Norgrove Penny told the group that the program is designed to help anyone run a marathon "whether you've run 20 marathons before or never put on a pair of running shoes in your life."

Penny, a runner and cardiologist, assured the audience the anti-running movement that has surfaced recently is wrong in its criticism of the sport.

He said virtually all injuries resulting from the overuse syndrome — too much, too fast — are not serious.

Kneecap problems — stress fractures, shin splints and achilles tendon — disappear with rest and therapy and, contrary to opinion, running does not cause arthritis, Penny said.

Most common causes of injury are improper training techniques, failure to do the proper flexibility and strengthening exercises that go along with running, wearing the wrong footgear and anatomical problems that can be corrected by shoe inserts.

Most medical conditions benefit greatly from running and it is now accepted therapy for psychological states like severe depression.

People can start running at 70 if they train properly.

Women physiologically adapt to running much better than men, said Penny who told the group he is [illegible] the day a woman wins the Boston Marathon and maybe even the Olympics.

Penny irked some of the athletes in the room when he said football players and weightlifters are not fit.

Real fitness, he explained, can only be achieved through endurance sports.

1% jump in food prices puts 1979 rise at 13.5%

OTTAWA (CP) — Food prices jumped one per cent from November to December putting them 13.5 per cent higher than a year earlier, the agriculture department reported today.

Main ingredients in the November-to-December increase were higher prices for beef, dairy products, cereal and bakery products, sugar and beverages, the department said in its monthly statement on food prices.

However there were notable price drops for fresh fruit and poultry.

The cost of nutritious diet for a family of four for a week in December was $62.01.

Beef prices rose three per cent as live-cattle prices increased at stockyards. Cattle prices are expected to continue rising this year.

Fluid milk prices increased 1.4 per cent because of higher prices to farmers. Producers of industrial milk used in dairy products received a pay raise effective Jan. 1. That will mean higher butter, cheese and skim milk powder prices in the near future.

Fish prices rose slightly in November and December because of dropping prices for pork and poultry. Only moderate increases in seafood are expected this year.

Higher labor and energy costs were the main contributors to a 1.9-per-cent rise in cereal and bakery product prices. While world wheat prices continue to rise, the domestic price is fixed and not expected to change for several months.

Lower prices for oranges helped push down the fresh fruit index by 3.9 per cent even though apple and banana prices are rising. A record citrus fruit crop is expected this year and that will help steady price levels.

Both fresh and stored vegetables are expected to increase in price during the next few months but potato prices should remain low because of a build-up in storage stocks.

The cost of beverages rose 1.2 per cent because of price increases for instant coffee and soft drinks. However the world coffee supply is strong which should help prices. However a nine-per-cent increase in the price of sugar in November-December will push up the cost of soft drinks.

Party turns into nightmare bodies under a collapsed wall near a window," Fillion said. "They were trying to get out through the window."

Normand Bedard, a spokesman for Falconbridge Copper Ltd., of Toronto, which is the town's largest employer and owner of the devastated dance hall, said the impact is colossal on this town of 3,500 people about 560 kilometres north of Montreal.

"I think pretty well everyone in town had a friend or relative in that place," he said.

The fire was Canada's worst in a building since a 1938 fire at Sacred Heart College in St. Hyacinthe, Que., took the lives of 46 people.

Two provincial police officers from the force's Chicoutimi detachment criminal investigations section were on the scene of the fire Tuesday and began questioning people to determine what had happened.

The grisly task of hauling the bodies out of the smoking ruins was performed by about 30 police officers, firemen and Falconbridge security guards who continued their search after dark Tuesday with the use of floodlights.

By early today, a light snow began covering the charred ruins of the Opemiska Club.

Survivors said the party had been a great success and was following in the tradition of the yearly Lions Club bash which in the past had often lasted as late as 5 o'clock in the morning.

This year, the hall was festooned with fir branches which had been hanging for about three weeks and were very dry. Outside, the temperature was about —10 C., considered mild for the time of year in northern Quebec and the night was clear.

Although the hall did not have an emergency sprinkler system, there were several chemical fire extinguishers on hand.

About an hour after 1980 got underway, several witnesses saw a young man set fire to a horseshoe arrangement of fir bows on one wall.

The man was apparently showing off his new cigarette lighter, some witnesses said.

One survivor, 18-year-old Joanne Benedetti, said that "at the beginning, everybody thought it was a joke." But when she saw smoke, she was one of the first to leave the building.

One of those who began operating the extinguishers on the spreading flames was Chapais Mayor Gerard Pellerin.

Pellerin suffered second-degree burns to his hands when burning Christmas decorations and curtains fell on him. Despite his injuries, he moved swiftly Tuesday to form a special emergency committee to help the 30 children who lost their parents in the fire.

"When the front doors were opened, the draught fed the fire, and when the side doors were opened that really created quite a draught," Bedard said.

As the fire began to consume the building, people escaping from the fire "were like walking torches as their nylon clothing burned," he said.

"There was a rush for the main entrance and then for one of the two exit doors in the corner," Bedard said.

"People started falling from lack of air. The fire chief is telling us most of the people died from lack of oxygen."

ment telecommunications installations, cutting off most communications within Afghanistan.

Diplomats in New Delhi said rebel tribesmen have joined forces with Afghan soldiers, their former foes, to battle the Soviet invasion force in Afghanistan.

No confirmed estimates of casualties were available. But diplomats in New Delhi and Afghan rebel sources in Pakistan said 250 Soviet troops were killed or wounded in Kabul during the coup.

They also reported more than 200 Soviet soldiers and 63 Moslem guerrillas killed in fighting in the Konar district, facing Pakistan's northwest frontier; 35 Moslem guerrillas and a number of civilians killed in Soviet air attacks in the northeast, and 400 guerrillas, a Soviet general and large numbers of Soviet and Afghan troops killed in fighting last Saturday in the northern province of Takhar, on the Soviet border.

There also are reports that Soviet troops are battling regular Afghan Army units still resisting last Thursday's Kremlin-engineered coup that ousted the late president Hafizullah Amin.

However, the reports could not be independently confirmed. Afghan officials are refusing to allow Western reporters out of Kabul. They deported 13 journalists today.

In Washington, President Carter called a meeting of his top military and diplomatic advisers at the White House today to discuss what action the United States can take.

One state department official said the usual procedure would be to take the case to the UN Security Council.

But in this instance, Carter administration officials are growing more confident that countries normally neutral in East-West conflicts in General Assembly debates will swing to an anti-Soviet position on Afghanistan, where the Russians are helping a pro-Soviet regime fight a Moslem insurgent movement.

Egypt has instructed its UN ambassador to examine the possibility of convening an emergency session of the Security Council on the Soviet intervention, government officials in Cairo said today.

Right-wing members of Britain's Conservative party called Tuesday for a British withdrawal from the Olympic Games.

One MP, Neville Trotter, said he has written to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher asking her to appeal to all Commonwealth countries to pull out of the Games.

Trotter said it would be monstrous for the Soviet Union to bask in the publicity of being host to the world after its tanks had been used to ravage a neighboring country.

The Soviet government poured forces into Afghanistan and then replaced the Communist government that had been in power only three months. President Hafizullah Amin was executed, and Babrak Karmal, another Communist, was called home from exile in Czechoslovakia to replace him.

Moscow contends the Afghan government asked for the troops and says the rebels were trained in Pakistan by the U.S., China and Egypt. The U.S. denied the allegations and President Carter has condemned the Soviet action in harsh terms.

In another development, about 60 Afghan students seized Afghanistan's embassy in New Delhi today to protest against the Soviet invasion of their country.

Meanwhile, Afghan students also occupied their country's embassy in Bonn, West Germany, today to protest against the Soviet takeover, police said.

if your home was built before 1961

If your home was built before January 1, 1961, the Federal Government will pay 100% of the cost of insulation materials up to a maximum of $350. and one third of the cost of labor up to a value of $150. That makes the total grant (not a loan) available $500. Insulation used in attics, walls, crawl spaces and basements all qualify for the grant. Do it now . . . more than $28,000,000 has already been given to Canadian homeowners under the C.H.I.P. program. Therm-attic blown cellulose insulation is manufactured and installed in your home to exacting standards set by C.M.H.C. for your safety and comfort. Our expert crews can top up the existing insulation in your walls and attic in a few short hours, making your home warmer in winter and cooler in summer. Best-dressed New Year's bather was obviously this man

A record splash in English Bay

Times News Service

VANCOUVER — A record 1,407 persons plunged into English Bay to greet the new decade in the 60th annual Polar Bear Swim.

The turnout on New Year's Day easily surpassed the old record of 984 swimmers set in 1978 and was probably due to the mild, 10-degree Celsius temperature.

Bruce Jackson of West Vancouver, who stayed in the 8-degree water the longest, said the key to braving the cold was simple — rum.

"I was in for about a half-hour, but I don't feel bad," said Jackson, emerging from the bay in good spirits. "I'm full of rum, that's my secret. Drink 40 ounces of rum a day and brush your teeth."

Most bathers managed only a quick dip before retreating to the comfort of hot coffee and warm, dry clothes.

Rene Bol won the major prize of the day, a trophy for finishing first in the 90-metre dash that opens the annual event.

"I got a good start," Bol said. "I only lasted five minutes after that, though. It's too cold to hack it any longer than that and my toes are still numb."

Oldest bather was Minnie Vainio, 76, while Janice Anne Jean, 2, was the youngest.

B.C. women head south for abortions

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 1,000 Canadian women, most of them from British Columbia, travel to Washington state every year for same-day, few-questions-asked abortions.

U.S. doctors and nurses say although 12,000 abortions are performed in B.C. each year, many women are frustrated by Canadian abortion laws, and the time-consuming bureaucratic process necessary before hospitals will go ahead with the procedure.

A woman who wants an abortion in B.C. must convince her doctor and a gynecologist to present her case to a hospital committee for approval. She must have lived in the hospital area for the past six months, and if she is under 16 or 19, depending on how the law is interpreted, require her parent's consent.

Under U.S. law, a girl of 14 can get a therapeutic abortion without parental consent if she can pay the $125 to $130 fee to a private clinic. All she has to do is make an appointment with the clinic. She doesn't even have to give her real name.

At the Bellingham Family Practice Clinic, about 80 kilometres south of Vancouver, five general practitioners perform about 20 abortions each week, mostly on Washington women but many on Canadians.

Last year 2,968 abortions were performed on out-of-state residents, says Mary O'Hara of Washington's social and health services department. Of those, one-third were Canadians.

Oil port restriction wiped out

SEATTLE (AP) — A Washington State policy banning construction of a major oil port east of Port Angeles has been quietly erased from the state's coastal zone management program.

Robert Knecht, head of the federal Office of Coastal Zone Management, signed on Monday a decision granting the state permission to drop the prohibition from its plan.

The so-called "Evans Statement" was inserted in the coastal program by former governor Dan Evans in 1976. A year later his successor, Dixy Lee Ray, asked the federal government's permission to delete it.

With the Evans statement gone, an amendment to the Marine Mammals Protection Act, pushed through Congress by Sen. Warren Magnuson, is the only law keeping oil superports — and supertankers — outside Puget Sound.

In a final environmental impact statement published in late November, staff of the Office of Coastal Zone Management argued that deletion of the Evans policy would have little impact because of the federal legislation.

The Evans statement said Washington supported, "as a matter of overriding policy," the concept of a single, major crude-oil port at or west of Port Angeles only.

Landmark burns

VANCOUVER (CP) — A downtown Vancouver landmark, the Angus Apartments adjacent to the mansion built by Rogers Sugar founder B. T. Rogers, was destroyed by fire Tuesday night.

All the occupants of the three-storey brick building in the city's West End were believed to have been safely evacuated but an elderly woman was reported treated at hospital for smoke inhalation.

The Angus was built in 1914 and the original Rogers' mansion, now designated a heritage site, dates from 1901.

BCR counting on LRB

VANCOUVER (CP) — A negotiator for British Columbia Railway said [illegible]day he hoped a B.C. Labor Relations Board ruling on the contentious manning issue will result in renewed negotiations to settle a two-week-old strike on the Crown-owned railway.

The LRB is hearing an application by the Joint Council of B.C. Rail Unions' for a statutory declaration that the council's constitution prohibits the seven-union body from negotiating a reduction in the size of train crews.

The council maintains the issue must be dealt with in talks with the United Transportation Union, the union affected, and not at "main table" negotiations.

The railway's proposal to reduce crews to two trainmen from three where appropriate is the issue that stymied talks in the strike.

Meanwhile Ross Walker, vice-president for Canadian National Railways Mountain region, said CN's rail bridge across Second Narrows will not be restored before the end of February, a month longer than first estimated.

Difficult tidal conditions at the site and bad weather forced an extension of the repair period.

The bridge was knocked out Oct. 12 when it was struck and by a Japanese freighter travelling in dense fog.

Boost for Human Rights

Human rights advocates dissatisfied with the functioning of the B.C. Human Rights Commission should take heart with a recent decision by the Appeals Court of Ontario.

The court ruled that the act of discrimination is regarded with the same seriousness as a broken contract or slander. It was the first time such a ruling has been made in any country with a judicial system that uses English common law as its foundation.

An East Indian woman attempted to sue a community college in Toronto for refusing her employment because of her race. The appeals court decision did not establish whether her charge had any merit. That will be decided at a later date by a lower court.

The court established that a person could seek remedy in the courts for alleged racial discrimination. It decreed racial discrimination is so pernicious, so dangerous to peace and order in society that its expression must be contained by making the perpetrator compensate the victim by paying damages.

The possibility exists that the ruling will be taken to the Supreme Court of Canada. If the decision is not challenged or if it is ratified by the Supreme Court, people alleging racial discrimination will have an alternative to the Human Rights Commission that was set up by Ontario. Until now, people seeking recourse for alleged discrimination could file a complaint only with the Human Rights Commission.

The process is similiar in British Columbia. The Human Rights Branch administers the B.C. Human Rights Code and investigates complaints. If it finds foundation to the charge it will attempt arbitrating a solution. Failing a resolution, the case is brought to the attention of the Minister of Labor who in turn decides whether the case merits a board of inquiry. Under the Human Rights Code, a case only will go to court if a party does not fulfill requirements laid down by the board of inquiry.

However, because the provincial minister decides whether an alleged violation of the code is brought to a board of inquiry, many complain that the enthusiasm with which human rights issues are pursued has much to do with the government of the day. One minister could show less interest than the next.

Defence lawyers for Seneca College argued that the only recourse open to the woman was through the provincial Human Rights Commission. A lower court agreed, but the appeals court differed and said in effect that the fact there was no precedent didn't mean that a suit couldn't be launched in the courts.

Although the Ontario decision is not binding in B.C., it will no doubt eventually prompt a decision on the same topic by B.C. courts.

As it stands now, the ruling means that in Ontario racial discrimination can no longer be regarded as a private matter or something that lies within the domain of a provincial commission. Perhaps one day it will become of the law of Canada, not just Ontario.

Indirect subsidy

One of the ironies of the proposal to re-introduce coastal freight and passenger service on the west coast is that it might end up being indirectly subsidized by the Canadian government.

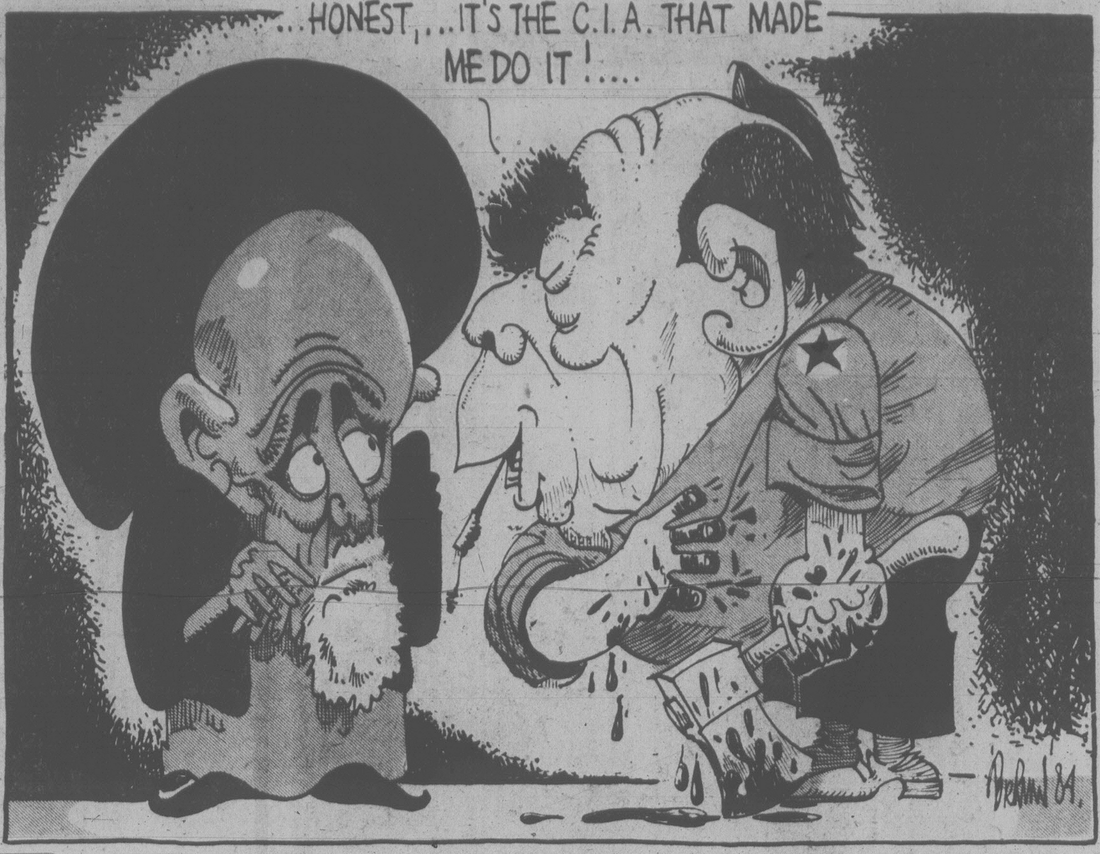
A principal of Aero-Aquanatic Ltd. Anthony Wilson says the White Rock based company is attempting to purchase the 3,171 ton vessel Federal Maple without creating "something political that might blow-up."

The Federal Maple, along with a sister ship, was built in Canada 18 years ago and then given to the government of Trindad and Tobago. The Canadian government also subsidized the operation of the vessels until 1977. Since then both ships have been laid up.

Wilson is worried that the government of Caribbean country might decide to keep the vessel if there is much publicity given to its use in Canadian waters. "They are obviously sensitive about selling off a ship they got free from Canada."

Wilson says his company is getting the vessel at "a very, very, very inexpensive price."

It is interesting that Aero-Aquanatic is proposing a marine service similiar to that of Northland Navigation Ltd. Northland, amid a tremendous public outcry from the central north coast, cut its service when the federal government removed a $4 million annual operating subsidy. If the Federal Maple is purchased at that "very inexpensive price", the government will indirectly help resurrect a transportation system it scuttled four years ago.



...HONEST,...IT'S THE C.I.A. THAT MADE ME DO IT!....

Ontario's power erosion

OTTAWA — Driving home the other day, trying to see through a salt-caked windshield, I caught the tag end of a CBC radio talk show in which the commentator summarized the Seventies as, "the decade in which Canada lost its self-confidence."

At the time, I nodded in agreement. Later, perhaps only because the windshield cleared, and the snow outside sparkled, I had second thoughts.

My second thought was this one: Through the Seventies, most Canadians in fact gained in self-confidence; however, the people writing these pessimistic reviews of the Seventies belong mostly to a popular class, liberal intellectuals, and live mostly in a particular region, Ontario, both of which indeed have suffered an erosion of self-confidence. If unconsciously so, these commentators are writing about themselves, not about their audience.

Farmers and other primary producers capturing economic power.

Westerm boom

Now to try to prove this point.

Go West, young person. But skip Alberta, about which we've already been told more than we could possibly want to know.

Instead, consider Saskatchewan. In 1970, this was a broken province. It's population was in decline: A worldwide glut had dropped the price of wheat to less than $2 a bushel. To prevent potash mines from closing, the provincial government rationed production. To reduce wheat production, Ottawa paid farmers not to sow their fields. Oil exploration — there was no market for the stuff — had ceased.

Today, Saskatchewan has started its own Heritage Fund. It has wheat and oil and potash and uranium, and the world wants as much of each as it can get. The province's population is soaring. So are its cities: In Saskatoon, more office space is under construction or is being planned than has been built so far in the city's history.

As goes Saskatchewan, so go, obviously, Alberta and British Columbia, although not as yet Manitoba.

Now go as far east as you can. In 1970, Newfoundland [illegible] another broken province. The outports were emptying of people. Fish catches were at an historic low, and the best of the stocks were being scooped up by foreign trawlers.

Newfoundland soon may discover as much oil off its coast as exists in the North Sea. This, if it happens, will be luck. The crucial change there is pre-oil. The fish came back, and thanks to the 200-mile limit, Newfoundlanders went back to catching them. As central to the self-confidence of Newfoundlanders, their own Codpeace won the Seal Hunt propaganda war against Greenpeace.

Some of Newfoundland's euphoria has infected the Maritimes, most particularly Halifax which transformed itself through the Seventies from an urban backwater into a vibrant provincial metropolis.

On to Quebec. No matter what happens from now on, whether in the referendum or later, Quebecers never can go back to where they were before November 15, 1976. By electing the Parti Quebecois, Quebecers lost their fear, and won their self-confidence. Indeed, this very self-confidence may defeat the PQ, since Quebecers know now they have no reason to fear the rest of the country.

Women, lastly. The seventies was the decade of their awakening. And they'll never go back.

Why then so many sad sighs for the Seventies?

Go back almost two decades. Early on in the Sixities, the New Class, as it's been called, gained power in Canada and in most western countries. Essentially, its members were liberal intellectuals: university professors and teachers; civil servants; technocratic experts of all kinds; cultural bureaucrats; lawyers; journalists. They were each nation's best and brightest, and they won for themselves power, prestige and high salaries.

Sometime in the mid-Seventies (the Sixities, among the other oddities of that decade, continued until well into the Seventies), the New Class began to lose power. Bureaucrats replaced real estate developers as the favorite object of abuse at cocktail parties. Academics stopped arguing about Shakespeare and Schopenhauer, and started arguing about tenure and unions. (Journalists, for reasons that escape me, haven't yet become objects of abuse. Lawyers, if anyone tried to abuse them, would sue, and so are safe.)

Power shift

As the Seventies turn into the Eigties, power and prestige and high salaries, are shifting to other groups within society, or more accurately, are shifting back to old groups: To primary producers, such as oil riggers and miners and farmers and fishermen; to skilled tradesmen, who are in short supply unlike sociologists, and to businessmen, but to independent entrepreneuers rather than to those white collar bureaucrats who happen [illegible] work for large corporations rather than for large governments.

As well, across Canada, power is shifting from the centre, Ontario, where the New Class has been most clearly in charge, to the country's periphery, where other cultural and social values are in command.

Yet the New Class still has the last word. It writes, or tapes, or films, the first rough draft of history. The requiems for the Seventies, therefore, really are a requiem for the New Class. But not for most Canadians.

JAMES RESTON

Larger issues threatened

WASHINGTON — Soviet foreign policy may seem reckless these days but at least it is consistent and almost predictable. When in doubt, the Russians protect their borders and defend the turf beyond their borders.

This is what they did in Afghanistan. They didn't send protests to the United Nations about the civil war in that country. They merely sent in their troops, took the place over and eliminated the opposition.

It would probably be wrong to think that they believe primarily in ideology. They concentrate on military power and geography.

They have recently moved more power into the northern islands which they took from Japan at the end of the last World War.

Trenching borders

They are supporting Vietnam in its savage war against Cambodia in order to establish Soviet power in Southeast Asia on the southern flank of the People's Republic of China.

They moved quickly into Afghanistan, which has a narrow border with China, in order to be sure that they would have a pliable ally in Kabul.

All across their southern flank, the Soviets have been careful to encourage political forces they could manipulate or control. And they have been careful to avoid supporting terrorists who take over embassies by force — that sort of anarchy, they concede, could be turned against Moscow — but they have been vicious in their propaganda against the United States during the Iranian crisis, and supportive of Ayatollah Khomeini in hope that the Communist Tudeh Party of Iran may take over when the ayatollah falls.

Accordingly, from the Sea of Japan to the Indian Ocean to the oilfields of the Persian Gulf, the Soviets have been slowly but carefully trying to change the balance of power in their favor, and this is a strategic decision of considerable world importance.

Moreover, it has created a fundamental conflict within the Carter administration about how to respond to these strategic Soviet moves.

Zbigniew Brzezinski, the president's national security adviser, has been arguing that the Soviets have been challenging vital United States interests from the Sea of Japan to the Mediterranean and that this challenge must be opposed much more directly by the United States.

The State Department has been urging caution and compromise. Secretary Vance at State and Secretary Brown at Defense do not believe that the United States can confront the Soviets successfully along the southern flank of the Soviet Union.

Brzezinski is particularly worried about the effect on Pakistan of Moscow's moves into Afghanistan and is concerned about the indifference of India to this latest crisis — an India which may soon have a government more sympathetic to the Soviet Union.

The interesting thing about all of this is that the Russians themselves seem rather indifferent, rather casual about the reaction in the United States to their military intervention in Afghanistan.

The Russians are well aware of the political cost of these power-plays on their relations with the United States. No doubt they want a second strategic arms agreement with Washington. But apparently they have decided that the Senate of the United States is not going to ratify the second U.S.-Soviet Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty — so they are using their power and influence to take over wherever they can along their borders and beyond, particularly in the oil regions of the Middle East.

The United States, meanwhile, is moving in more cautious diplomatic channels. It may turn again to the United Nations and ask for economic sanctions against Iran.

But as in its appeal to "world opinion" to oppose the Soviet Union's military intervention in Afghanistan, this appeal is not likely to have much support.

No doubt, America's allies would back limited economic sanctions against Iran — fearing that if they didn't, Washington would take military action on its own, which is something the allies fear and oppose.

Sanctions futile

But as the Western allies and the United Nations discovered in the case of Rhodesia, economic sanctions don't really work. They make headlines and produce psychological pressures, but they tend not to compel a political solution; rather they seem to unify the contending forces against the United Nations and the United States.

The tragedy of all this is that in the struggle between the United States and the Soviet Union over Afghanistan, Vietnam, Cambodia, Somalia and the the Middle East in general, the other larger issues involving the control of arms, trade, monetary matters and population are being lost.

At the beginning of the '70s, the United States and the Soviet Union were talking with each other about their common interests. At the beginning of the '80s, they are talking again as they did in the '40s and '50s about their differences.

Negotiate

I am disturbed by the response of the national party leaders and federalist spokesmen to the Quebec referendum. From around the world we hear of national independence movements using terrorism as their strategy to achieve their ends. The Parti Quebecois has consistently advocated nonviolent political process as the means to determine Quebec's future, and has rallied the Quebec nationalists behind this strategy. The federalist spokesmen have just as consistently denied the legitimacy of their approach.

The Parti Quebecois have been willing to compromise on their original objective of total independence, and now advocate continued ties with Canada through sovereignty-association. The federalists have ridiculed this spirit of compromise, and criticised Rene Levesque for not maintaining a hard-line approach.

The recently announced wording of the referendum contained a further compromise in requesting only a mandate to negotiate the terms for possible sovereignty-association. This is a clear indication that the Parti Quebecois wants to attain status as a nation for Quebec through negotiation rather than unilateral action. Prime Minister Clark stated that he would not negotiate. Pierre Trudeau is appalled at the idea of even asking the people of Quebec what they want. Ed Broadbent and provincial leaders across the country have all been dissatisfied that the referendum asks only a mandate for a moderate position.

I would like to have Quebec remain in peaceful association with Canada, preferably as a province of this country, but this should be a matter of choice not acquiescence to federal intransigence. I think the referendum asks the right question, and it is one to which we should all want to know the answer. Do the Quebec people want to negotiate for a relationship with Canada in which it is not a member of the confederation? If so, and if we refuse to acknowledge the legitimacy of negotiation to achieve this end, how long will it be before nationalist extremists turn to seeking independence by other means? — William J. Huot, 431 Ker Avenue.

Giveaways

We learn through the media tnat Mr. Joe Clark intends to do with Petro-Canada as Mr. Bennett did with BCRIC, sell shares and give away shares.

Mr. Bennett's deal cost millions of dollars of taxpayers money and the give-away shares have no earning power at all. We can only sell them to those people that have the means to buy them.

Apparently Mr. Clark's deal is the same. The taxpayer bought the whole of Petro-Canada but Mr. Clark intends to sell it to those who can afford the price.

The sale of the shares will cost the taxpayer millions of dollars and the shares will be bought up by the multinational oil companies who are now looking forward to the sale.

The people, the poorer people, will be again gulled by the politicians who are supposed to serve the public. We pay their salaries but they do not do their job.

We can only hope that the Tories will be beat at the polls, but, of course, the affluent people will vote them in even though the poorer people will not get a fair deal. — Charles R. Atwell. 1485 Lang St.

Poor value

The statement that the election will cost approximately $55 million, a measly $2 for "every man, woman and child," is misleading and stupid. Children don't pay income tax, many women don't either, neither do people on social assistance, welfare, inmates of our penal institutions and others. The $55 million is supposed to cover only the expenses connected directly with the mechanics of the procedure, e.g. the printing of ballots, the renting of halls, the renumerations to scrutineers, returning officers and the like.

But what about the aircraft, trains, busses, cars which will be criss-crossing the country, and the various printing of propaganda literature which each political party will distribute to the voters, the advertising through the media, and so on?

If all this rather complex exercise in democracy could bring about a better Canada, nobody will begrudge the money spent to achieve a worthwhile end: unfortunately, it will not.

Any candidates who will come out with an endless string of promises are knowingly deceiving the public, which does not appear to be in the mood for listening. In the meantime, for at least 60 days and perhaps longer, the government, including the opposition, is out of business.

Who knows it may be a blessing in disguise? We can show our displeasure by not attending meetings, rallies, by returning unwanted literature: but, regardless of our feelings toward this untimely election, we should exercise our franchise because that is our duty. And we should perform this duty to the best of our ability, with a mind free from biases, prejudices and pressures. — E. I. Lattes, 432—200 Dallas Rd.

When the earth shakes, so do Latin politicians

By ENRIQUE ZILERI GIBSON

(Gibson is editor of the news magazine Caretas, published in Lima, Peru. He wrote this for the New York Times)

LIMA, Peru — The other night I had dinner at a fish place with Ricardo Toledo, an expert in catastrophes. He is no witch doctor but a top-notch Mexican engineer who wears a classical Mayan profile, English tweeds and a rather bookish air when he talks of earthquakes, hurricanes, floods, and also of coups and civil wars. "There is a relationship between one and the other, you know," he said thoughtfully.

Now, I had always thought that there was some sort of parallel — and sometimes a magic underground connection — between natural disasters and man-made political catastrophes. Take earthquakes. When there is a tremor in, say, Colombia, you usually read shortly afterward of a quake somewhere in southern Chile. Then you feel that the backbone of the Andes is starting to creak, that a subterranean plate is rubbing elbows with the continent, and you expect the earth to tremble any day or night.

The same thing happens with military coups, and when Col. Alberto Natusch Busch shook his fist recently at Bolivia's constitutional government, political seismologists in Peru and Ecuador set out to look for signs of an echo of an impending repetition: an increase in the number of snakes in the grass, tell-tale gases percolating up in the world of conspiracy, dogs howling in the distance. This is no idle sport in a continent that has registered 13 major earthquakes and 31 successful military coups since 1960.

Ricardo Toledo, who works with computer models and is a consultant to the insurance business, set me straight on some things. The fact, for instance, that two important quakes in Peru in 1960 were followed by two others that year in Chile, a fifth in Peru in 1961 and a sixth in Chile in 1962, does not mean that the latter were aftershocks of the first. Tectonic plates do not work that way.

Contagious military and political behavior, on the other hand, can travel like a tidal wave. The coups d'etat in Peru, Honduras, Ecuador, Guatemala and the Dominican Republic in 1962 and 1963 were not altogether unrelated. And there is even more significance in sequences like the armed "institutional" takeovers of the 1962 Brazilian revolution, the 1966 Argentinian revolution and the 1968 Peruvian revolution. There have also been waves of disenchantment that have rocked back and forth in the 70's.

Toledo denied that there was any cabalistic value in the numbers and asked me not to attribute special telluric powers to the men involved — even to Manuel Prado, who governed Peru twice. During his first period, a devastating shock hit Lima and Callao in 1940; in his second, the 1960 quakes combined with a drought. Things got so bad that a satirical columnist referred to the president as Him, to avoid unlucky contamination. Toledo says that Don Manuel was just plainly jinxed, a factor difficult to feed to computers — a fact, however, confirmed in 1967: As he lay in state in the Lima Cathedral, a hefty tremor scared the daylights out of everybody, finally sending Him on his way.

Actually, Toledo relates natural disaster and human upheaval in a serious way. A friend of his, a Chilean geophysicist, has studied and written informally on how the 1960 quakes exacerbated social tension in his country and how they may have contributed to the election of the Marxist Salvador Allende in the next decade.

Again, the 1972 Managua earthquake probably marks the beginning of the end of the Somoza dynasty. Anastasio, who was then a more discreet head of the National Guard, became president in name also; economic contrast accentuated, corruption increased, power became more rigid, until they culminated in civil war.

A cataclysm in northern Peru in 1970 that claimed over 50,000 lives accelerated rural emigration, and the "marginal" areas in the cities contributed to a 34 per cent "leftist" vote in the 1970 election — as much as President Allende got in Chile.

According to Toledo, now we should watch the Dominican Republic, in the wake of last fall's hurricanes.

Will we ever be able to adequately predict earthquakes and coups, drought and civil commotion? Perhaps, says Toledo, but he explains elliptically that he's currently reading a book titled Godel, Escher, Bach. The musician is "all fugues and variations; Escher is a Dutch engraver who pictured fish turning into birds; and Godel, a German mathematician whose theorem proposes that no coherent mathematical system can ever encompass all truths."

No computer could have predicted the recent Bolivian coup or, for that matter, the colonel's undoing 16 days later by a lady, Lidia Gueiler, the new interim president of that country, or the unprecedented attitude of the Andean Pact nations, clearly repudiating the military takeover. Now it would seem . . . wait a minute! Is that a truck passing?

Medieval ruling by Mormons

THE ECONOMIST

JOHNSON . . . she dared to differ

Excommunication has a medieval ring. Yet in Virginia last month the Mormon church authorities excommunicated a woman, Mrs. Sonia Johnson, who had been a lifelong and devoted member of the church. Her crime? She had formed a group called Mormons for ERA (the proposed equal rights amendment for women). She had also criticized in public the attempts of her church to defeat the ERA in states where the Mormons are strong, such as Utah, Idaho, Arizona and Florida.

The church authorities say that they support equal rights, and equal pay for women, but object to the amendment because it is drawn in such general terms and, they fear, could undermine the family and the moral standards for which the church stands. They deny that Mrs. Johnson's support for the amendment was an issue at her trial (indeed she was not allowed to mention ERA). The charges against her were that she had spread false doctrine and worked against the church's leaders and teachings.

Excommunication will cost Mrs. Johnson the voluntary jobs that she does; she is a church organist and taught a women's group. She will not be allowed to take part in church services or discussions. Worst of all, she is told that she will not go to heaven and so will be separated throughout eternity from her four children and her husband (whom she converted to Mormonism).

The place of women in the Mormon church is not high. They are not allowed to belong to the "priesthood" as all adult men do. They are expected to be homebodies, although careers are not forbidden. If they are charged with wrongdoing they are not tried by the same judges as men.

Mrs. Johnson seems to have accepted all this, and only went into politics when, as she saw it, the church had already gone into politics itself. Some other Mormons are beginning to ask whether the church has not violated the constitutional separation of church and state and perhaps imperilled its tax-exempt status.

The Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints, to give it its formal name, defeated ERA in Utah, helped to defeat it in Nevada and was behind Idaho's attempt to rescind the approval it gave in 1972. Whether it is possible for a state to change its mind is a controversial legal issue.

The case, brought by Idaho and Arizona, is going to be tried, in the first instance, by Judge Marion Callister of Boise, Idaho, who is an official of the Mormon church. The department of justice asked him to stand down. He has refused.

Senator Frank Church called the department's request "a groundless insult to the judge." Church is running hard for re-election in Idaho.

Rights abused

By PAUL JOHNSON
Manchester Guardian

Human rights were abused in at least 111 countries last year, according to the 1979 report of Amnesty International, published this month.

The report says abuse has a "global pattern," with political dissidents facing arrest, imprisonment without trial, torture and death.

It also highlights one problem of those people who simply "disappear." Martin Ennals, secretary-general of Amnesty International, described the plight of those people said to have disappeared as one of the "worst violations of human rights of our time" and one to which, until recently, the international community had paid little attention.

In Argentina, 15,000 people are alleged to have gone missing since the 1976 coup, while similar reports, on a smaller scale, have been received from Chile, Mexico, El Salvador, Paraguay and Uruguay.

Amnesty International catalogues violations country by country. In many Asian states, long-term imprisonment without trial remained prevalent. In Africa and the Middle East, many political prisoners were reported to have been executed.

In Eastern Europe, dissidents and human rights activists had been forcibly confined in psychiatric hospitals, while in Western Europe, the ill-treatment of prisoners in police custody gave cause for concern.

Acknowledging that the organization's reports on human rights inevitably arouse controversy, Mr. Ennals claimed that, when governments and regimes fell, the criticisms voiced by Amnesty International were normally found to have been "cautious understatements."

U.S. tightens Caribbean strings

By JEREMY TAYLOR

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad — It is beginning to dawn on the Caribbean that the sudden discovery by President Carter of Soviet combat troops in Cuba may have had less to do with the Cold War and hawkish senators than with energy.

Carter's solution — increased American naval patrols and manoeuvres in the Caribbean, a new Caribbean 'task force' at Key West in Florida — were at first seen as sabre-rattling, and as Carter's only way to dump a phoney "crisis" and placate domestic demands for firm action.

Now it is clear that the result has been a much increased American surveillance of the region. The aim may have been, in the end, to safeguard crucial energy supplies in a region which is shifting markedly leftwards.

There are even fears in the Caribbean the U.S. may be prepared to intervene to protect its own interests.

Up to a quarter of America's oil supplies have been passing through Caribbean export refineries and trans-shipment terminals. The world's largest refinery is in the region — Amerada Hess' 728,000 barrel-per-day installation in St. Croix in the Virgin Islands.

Hess has a 150,000 bpd refinery and trans-shipment terminal under construction in Saint Lucia, which became independent from Britain in February and installed a new left-leaning government in July. There is acute dissatisfaction with the Hess agreement there, not least because the island will receive 4 cents per barrel refined, compared with the 16 cents Trinidad gets from Texaco.

The Trinidad refinery exports to the U.S., as do other major refineries in the Netherlands Antilles, the Bahamas, and the Caymans.

Only Trinidad exports its own oil; but Barbados is now producing about a third of its own requirements, and there is intense exploration going on in Guyana, and due to start in Jamaica, Puerto Rico (which has yet to hold its referendum on independence) and Cuba.

Trinidad, like Venezuela and Mexico, is also sitting on huge reserves of natural gas causing the U.S. to view it with paternal protectionism. The Carribbean also supplies 65 per cent of America's bauxite and aluminium, and U.S. investment in the region runs to more than $4 billion.

From Washington, it looks as if all of this can be put at risk as the region is pushed deeper into political and economic crisis by under-development and unemployment, plus the desperate pressure put on island economies by the spiralling price of energy.

Seen in terms of oil politics, it looks as if the region is moving quickly out of the American orbit: the March coup in Grenada, then new leftist governments in Dominica and Saint Lucia — where next? Aid has been quickly stepped up, in the hope of damping down this blazing oil slick.

But all this looks very different in the Caribbean itself. There has been sharp criticism of the new American presence. And there is hardly a country in the region, not even the closest friends of the U.S. — Barbados and Trinidad and Tobago — who would countenance direct American intervention.

What are seen in the U.S. as potential Caribbean trouble spots — Grenada and Saint Lucia — are seen in the Caribbean as potential breakthrough points for the sort of political and economic change that has to come in some form or other. It is being asked what function an increased American military presence can have, if not an intervention capability.

And direct military intervention could do more to destroy U.S energy sources in the region than a dozen new governments friendly with Havana.

Can schools kill sex?

Katharine Whitehorn

LONDON — No Sex, Please, We're British is the title of one of London's longest-running shows; but the phrase is beginning to have a somewhat dated ring. What with a stripper turning up to do in Soho what they wouldn't let her do in Las Vegas, and London being called the sin capital of the world, and scarcely a news-stand but has its share of bold girls thrusting their bare bosoms towards the timid reader, you'd have thought that when it came to sex, Britain was just the place to be.

So anyone who read about the recent fuss caused by a small committee recommending not only that the age of consent to sexual intercourse should either come down or be abolished altogether, but that there should be much, much more sex education in schools, could be forgiven for being bewildered about it all. More sex education? Even less control of the young?

The people who want the kids taught more about sex say, first, that however much they may know about How A Baby Is Born they don't know nearly enough How A Baby Is Prevented; and that, with one girl in eight having sex before she's 16, it's important they should be told. Boys especially, it seems, since they are apparently told even less than the girls.

These hopefuls urge that if teenagers were so taught, they would understand about sex in a Warm And Loving Context (instead of in the chilly bus shelter, as usual) and be less tempted to fall into scrappy relationships that can only end in tears.

In saying this, they [illegible] only picking up a trend that's already a flood tide in the United States, where sex therapy, sex study, sex professorships, sex indoctrination, sex research, sex labs, and sex institutions proliferate. Every other week you read of some sex crusader urging that sex should be taught in first grade, on film, for five hours a week from the age of five, and one is left wondering how, if it takes all that much learning, the Americans ever used to reproduce themselves before.

It all prompted one American commentator to suggest that C. S. Lewis was right; he said that each age is obsessed by the dangers of the vices it hasn't got. Rigid, suffocating puritanical ages are constantly warning of the dangers of looseness and indiscipline; lecherous ages are anxious to abolish the hideous restrictions of hypocrisy and morals. And the age that has taught its children more about sex than ever before is still obsessed with the need to teach them more.

Myself, I've never quite been able to see why, in the case of a subject like history or geography, it's considered old-fashioned and stuffy to learn it from a blackboard or a book, but modern to allow the kids to embark on projects; whereas in the case of sex it's the other way round. Learn it all from individual projects with the boy of your choice in a disused parking lot, and you are old-fashioned; it is far more modern to be shown a book, a diagram or better still a movie of how it's all done.

But I'm sure enough of two things. The first is that there never will come a time when parents talk easily about sex to their teenage children; the embarrassment is part of the incest taboo, the barrier that keeps you from associating sexy feelings with your own close relatives. So parents ought to get the basics across before the children are anywhere near the age of spots and breaking voices, black moods and stupendous sighs; children ought to grow up knowing about birth control the way they grow up knowing how you turn off a tap.

The second thing relates to what actually happens in schools. The British Chamber of Commerce recently deplored the fact that those who have been taught maths for 16 years apparently can't write out an invoice or add up a bill. The only two nations to need translation at all their conferences are the English and the French — they've been learning each other's languages in school for 10 years, but can't speak a word. And how much do you remember of those lists of kings and presidents, premiers and laws and revolutions?

If the moralists really want the kids to grow up in ignorance, I'd say insisting on sex being taught as a subject in schools was much the best way to go about it. Then it would be just one more dead tedious thing for teachers to drone on about, to be instantly forgotten as soon as school is out. And just think how good that would be for everyone's cricket.

No great gain for Thomson

TORONTO (CP) — Despite possible Thomson Newspapers Ltd. share profits of $1.30 this year and $1.50 in 1980, investors should not expect great stock market gains over the next year unless the company makes a major acquisition, says a Toronto investment firm. Gardiner Watson Ltd. says Thomson purchases of newspapers in one-paper communities should guarantee high profits, but earnings growth may be limited by lack of larger acquisitions.

Swiss to tax gold sales

BERN (AP) — Switzerland has reintroduced a tax on sales of gold and gold coins, which will raise the retail price of the metal by more than five per cent.

A communique said the finance ministry, in agreement with the Swiss National Bank, decided to suspend a 25-year-old decree that exempted gold and gold coins traded in Switzerland from the tax.

Cattle

CALGARY (CP) — Receipts to 11 a.m. today at the Calgary public stockyards totalled 147 cattle and calves.

Receipts consisted mostly of slaughter cows with a few slaughter steers. Trade was active on all available classes. Slaughter steers sold steady while all grades of cows gained $2.

A1-2 steers over 1,000 lbs. $80-$81.40. D1-2 cows 56-60; D3 and 5, 52-56.

No feeder cattle on offer.

New York

Precious metals mining stocks soared in active trading today as the price of gold and silver climbed to new peaks on bullion markets.

But stock prices in general dropped sharply on moderate volume. Analysts said Soviet involvement in Afghanistan compounded continuing worries over Iran, and made investors anxious.

Gold, which often functions as an investment refuge in times of uncertainty, shot up $43 to $567.50 an ounce in London. Silver also hit a record $40 an ounce, up $8.

Among precious metals stocks, Benguet, with gold interests in the Philippines, jumped 1¼ to $7¼ as the second most actively traded NYSE stock. Dome Mines gained 5⅛ to $55⅞; ASA was up 4½ to $45¾; and Homestake Mining added 3¾ to $55¼.

The same fever which pushed precious metals producers up also took its toll on some users. Eastman Kodak, which uses huge amounts of silver to make film, fell 2⅛ to $46 as the most active NYSE issue. Polaroid was down 1⅝ to $26⅜.

London

The London stock market fell sharply near the close of moderate trading today.

The Financial Times index was down 7.4 to 406.8 as a national steel strike began.

Industrials and banks declined while golds advanced.

Canadian shares firmed.

Ford joins parade to higher prices

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. has joined the parade of higher car prices with an increase averaging $134 or 1.9 per cent, effective Wednesday.

Ford was the third of the five U.S. manufacturers to post higher sticker prices in the last 10 days. General Motors Corp. and American Motors Corp. earlier announced increases of 1.6 per cent.

Ford said its destination charges would also increae by an average of $11, not reflected in the announced $134 increase.

In Oakville, Ont., a Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. spokesman said the Canadian company will likely announce a price increase Wednesday.

Earnings

National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada Ltd., 40 weeks ended Nov. 3: 1979, $905,000, $1.28 a share; 1978, $921,000, $1.29.

Redlaw Industries Ltd., year ended Sept. 30: 1979, $412,000, 14 cents a share; 1978, $653,000, 26 cents.

1980 looks bleak for U.S.

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The world's largest bank along with a noted international banking economics division and a prestigious forecast center aren't very optimistic about this year's economics news. They say it's going to start out bad and get worse.

Little real relief from the effects of recession or the demands of inflation can be expected before the following year.

To the average wage earner it means continued erosion of take-home pay and savings.

Bank of America's fourth-quarter report predicts a recession early in 1980. So does the International Economics Division of Security Pacific National Bank and the UCLA Graduate School of Business Management.

In fact, most economics forecasters not only expect a recession early in 1980, they say it is overdue.

The recession, which is expected to cool off the inflationary economy and may be desirable from that end, has more immediate meanings for the average worker and his or her family.

It means less available housing because there will be fewer new housing starts, and more people will be trying to get what is now available. So prices will go up even higher.

It means far fewer automobiles will be made. And the auto industry is so large almost anything that happens has a widespread ripple effect in many other areas of the economy.

The unemployment rate will rise, about 1.5 per cent to 2 per cent nationally.

Consumer prices may go down one-tenth of a point generally, led by a nearly 2 per cent drop in food prices in the first quarter, at least, of the new year due to good supplies of meat, grain and poultry.

Any benefits that would accrue from that marginal drop will be totally absorbed by a whopping hike in energy costs. The real measure of that bite into family income cannot be fully measured yet because the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has not given the last word on oil prices.

Also, there likely will be more hikes in the cost of oil imported into the United States, and a continued rise in the cost of other forms of energy.

Overall, Bank of America has estimated it will be about 35 per cent more. Other experts give various amounts. Security Pacific says there will be an average increase in oil prices of 45 per cent in the coming year.

The UCLA Business Forecast, based on economic models, gives a figure of 57 per cent.

Inflation is expected to continue over 11 per cent, which is not much worse, or better, than it has been.

Volkswagen predicts sales of 10.4M cars

DETROIT (AP) — Volkswagen of America is forecasting U.S. auto industry sales — including sales of imported cars — of 10.4 million cars in 1980.

The forecast in a year-end statement Thursday by President James McLernon was the second-highest by an automaker so far. General Motors Corp. predicted 10.6 million, Ford Motor Co. 9.5 million and Chrysler Corp. 9.25 million. American Motors Corp. has not made a forecast for the calendar year.

VW recently stepped up U.S. production from 800 cars and pickup trucks a day to more than 1,000.

IBM to boost systems rates

ARMONK, New York (Reuter) — International Business Machines Corp. has said it is increasing purchase, rental and leasing prices on some of its most popular computer systems by five to seven per cent.

The world's largest computer manufacturer said the increases were due to higher business costs. IBM said Thursday it borrowed $300 million from Saudi Arabia's Central Bank to help pay for business expenses.

Included in the price increases are the company's Selectric typewriters and some data and word processing systems.

Death penalty for foul firms?

WEST HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Major corporate crimes ought to be punishable by death — or liquidation of the guilty corporations — says a University of New Haven humanities professor.

Noreen Dornenburg, the chairman of the university's humanities program, said the most serious corporate wrongdoing — such as massive pollution — should be considered a crime carrying punishment that could include death or conversion of the firm and its assets to public service uses.

Ms. Dornenburg, 35, acknowledged in an interview that she has not found any legal encouragement for her idea, "But if enough people are convinced that corporations should be forced to respond to the public good, the legal structure will emerge."

Students at the business-oriented university do not agree with her.

"They argue that business is absolutely amoral and therefore you cannot introduce a moral structure. Their purpose is to make a lot of money and not have to worry about it."

As a radical opponent of business at a business-oriented school, Ms. Dornenberg calls herself "reasonably fearless."

"I'm perfectly willing to be laughed at. Just tell me why I'm wrong."

Canada's business future dark but hopeful

The Canadian Press

Economic forecasts issued by the Canadian business community for 1980: Patches of cloud on the immediate horizon should give way to more settled conditions toward the end of the year.

Political storms centred in Ottawa and Quebec, a dampened United States economy and prospects for a widespread energy drought are casting shadows on some growth areas and obscuring the long-range outlook for others.

However, the annual predictions by the business leaders include a number of encouraging signs as shown in this selection of comments.

Sam Hughes, president, Canadian Chamber of Commerce: The immediate outlook is far from promising and the picture has been clouded even more by the defeat of the federal budget. Certainly we cannot hope to escape the effects of the weakness in the U.S. economy, and thus we should not expect to see much, if any, advance in economic activity in the first half of 1980. However, we can be more hopeful about the latter part of the year and the chamber expects that Canada's performance over the full year will be better than that of the U.S. Our nation's potential is truly impressive, and especially so if it is harnessed to appropriately encouraging policies.

John Bulman, president, Canadian Manufacturers' Association: It looks as though 1980 will start off on a subdued note in a number of industries but I'm still expecting a fairly good year for the manufacturing sector as a whole, particularly if the U.S. economy rebounds in the second half. In fact, I expect over-all production to be sustained at a fairly high plateau as many manufacturers work aggressively to offset the decline in the U.S. market with sales in offshore markets. Part of the difficulty Canada has in realizing its full economic potential is the usual degree of political uncertainty. However, I am confident Canadians will make wise and practical choices and face some hard realities in 1980.

Howard Hart, president, Canadian Pulp and Paper Association: Mild or severe, the recession in the U.S. will have an adverse effect on the pulp and paper industry. This effect will be delayed for a few months as expected declines in consumption will be offset to some extent by the need of consumers to increase inventories. Industry shipments and operating rates in 1980 could decline somewhat. Pulp and paper shipments from Canadian mills in 1979 are expected to have totalled 20.3 million tonnes, up from the previous record 20.1 million tonnes in 1978. Production is at high levels, return on investment healthier and major expansion and other capital investment programs have been started in many mill and forest operations.

Gordon Bell, president, Canadian Bankers' Association: With the spreading impact of the new global oil pressures and an emerging U.S. recession as well, there can be little doubt that Canada like other countries will be facing greater difficulties in the year ahead. The economy seems likely to grow more slowly, if not even to slip a little into reverse. Unemployment could increase considerably again and our problems with inflation will clearly persist. To confuse matters, the early weeks of the new year will be overlaid with all the fuss and flurry of a renewed national election campaign. Yet it would be a mistake to overlook some of the more encouraging aspects. Through the past year, Canadian business performance has been a good deal stronger than much commentary has recognized. And two of the key factors in this strength — the country's restored competitive capability and its widening energy potentials — will be continuing at least in some degree to support activity in the year ahead.

William Daniel, president, Shell Canada Ltd.: Canada enters the 1980s facing severe short-term problems in crude supply but with some of the strongest opportunities in the world for longer-term resource development, including a possible turnaround in our oil situation by 1990 or soon after. The next few years will be critical. Domestic crude-oil production, now running flat out, is expected to decline, leaving Canada with a growing appetite for crude at a time of unreliable and increasingly costly world supply. During this period, to the mid-80s, only three options are open to us: We must get serious about conservation, using legislation if necessary; natural gas must be substituted for oil at a much faster pace, and we must maintain a high level of exploration in existing producing regions.

John Bulloch, president, Canadian Federation of Independent Business: For small business, the next few years will be a difficult period of adjustment. Higher prices for energy, like higher taxes, will reduce the purchasing power of consumers and their capacity to buy a wide range of goods and services. But expensive energy can have a bright side. It means we need not fear the energy shortages that threaten our major trading partners because we have the potential to replace conventional oil with other forms of energy which we have in abundance.

David Morley, president, Grocery Products Manufacturers of Canada: We envisage Canadians will have to pay 13 per cent more for food in 1980, about the same rate of increase as in 1979, and there is unlikely to be a repeat in the foreseeable future of the 17.4-per-cent increase of 1978. The increase in 1980 will result from the higher cost of beef, fresh produce, energy, packaging and labor, as well as some risk from the value of the Canadian dollar. However, by 1981 we expect to see food price increases return to single-digit levels.

Alaska policeman hammers on hull in vain hope seamen were trapped inside

Ship that wouldn't sink finally slides to grave

KETCHIKAN, Alaska (AP) — Only a light sheen of oil was left on the water's surface when the capsized ore carrier Lee Wang Zin plunged without warning Tuesday to a 300-metre-deep grave at the bottom of the Gulf of Alaska, officials said.

There still was no trace of 28 missing crew members when the 225-metre freighter, being towed to a spot 110 kilometres off the southern tip of Alaska, sank suddenly about 35 kilometres west of Dall Island. The cause of the sinking was not known.

The ship, which spilled 100,000 gallons of fuel when it overturned Christmas Day near the Queen Charlotte Islands in a violent storm, had been en route to Japan from Prince Rupert with a load of iron.

The bodies of two of the ship's 30 Taiwanese crew members were found before the search for survivors was halted.

Personnel aboard the Salvage Chief, which had the Lee Wang Zin in tow, and the accompanying coast guard cutter Munro said the ship went down in about a minute.

The coast guard had planned to take the freighter to a point west of Dall Island and use either shells from the Munro's five-inch gun or explosives to rip open the hull and send the ship plunging almost 2.5 kilometres to the floor of an ocean canyon.

After the Lee Wang Zin overturned Dec. 25, she drifted north and an estimated 100,000 gallons of oil fouled the fish-rich waters of Dixon Entrance, between Alaska and B.C., and bays and inlets of Alaska's Clarence Strait.

The ship beached at Kendrick Bay on Prince of Wales Island, and commercial diver Del Hansen made a perilous trip into the ship in surging water to see if any of the crew had been trapped alive in air pockets. He found no bodies, and no signs of life.

The coast guard then made plans to move the vessel into deep water and send it to the bottom.

Franklin said water currents carried much of the leaked oil into the rivers inside Alaska. He said concentrations of oil were found in Kendrick Bay, southwest of Ketchikan; and in Bond Bay on the Cleveland Peninsula and in Thorne Bay on Prince of Wales Island, both northwest of Ketchikan.

The Lee Wang Zin was carrying about 300,000 gallons of bunker oil and 72,000 gallons of diesel oil when it sailed out of Prince Rupert into the teeth of gale-force winds and high seas, officials said.

By Tuesday, cleanup crews using containment booms and absorbent material had recovered about 1,500 gallons of it.

'Khomeini' hash

CAIRO (AP) — Egyptian hashish pedlars, keeping up with the headlines and the calendar, have introduced a new brand of the drug on the local market called "Khomeini Iran 1980." Egypt's illicit drug dealers usually name their hash after singers or politicians to increase its popular appeal.

Judge giving up full-time post

Judge William Ostler, who rose from court clerk to become one of Canada's most respected lay judges, has finished a 21-year career as a full-time provincial court judge.

While Ostler has stepped down as the administrative judge for Victoria provincial court, he will stay on as a three-day-a-week supernumerary judge.

Ostler was appointed a stipendiary magistrate Nov. 14, 1956, and became a full-time judge two years later.

Ostler's replacement, Judge Lorne Pearce of Kelowna, is expected to arrive later this week.

However, a new administrative judge for Victoria has not been named by the attorney-general.

Chief provincial court judge Lawrence Goulet, who makes recommendations for such appointments, said in Vancouver he expects to submit a name to the attorney-general within the week and that Ostler's administrative successor will probably be named within two weeks.

Inquest ruled out

Victoria coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre has decided against an inquest into the death Sunday of a 73-year-old woman in a bathtub at James Bay Lodge. It was first believed Bertha Bathgate fell and drowned but an autopsy showed she had a heart attack.

Christmas miracle

BENNETT

BONARE
. . . led way to safety

A Saskatoon pilot can thank the B.C. air ambulance service for his safe landing Christmas Eve.

Twenty-two-year-old Hurdal Janes, en route to Langley in a small Grumman Yankee, was flying in the dark at 16,000 feet 20 miles east of Mount Baker, without oxygen, low on fuel, heading the wrong way and unable to see the ground through cloud cover.

Janes is not qualified to fly by instruments and has no instrument flying experience.

Janes radioed his predicament to the Vancouver flight centre, which had picked him up on radar.

Air traffic control contacted a government Cessna Citation jet flying to Patricia Bay airport after a mercy mission to Kamloops.

Pilot Capt. Alex Bonare and first officer Norm Bennett spotted the tiny Grumman in the gloom about 6 p.m. as the jet was descending from 30,000 to 11,000 feet.

Bonare lowered the landing gear and flaps to reduce speed and radioed Janes to follow them down through the clouds to Abbotsford airport.

When the little single engine plane touched down it was out of gas.

"A Christmas Eve miracle," said air operations manager Jack McNeill.

Janes made it to his mother's home at Langley for Christmas.

On Dec. 28 he moved the Grumman over to Langley airport, put a sign in the window and headed back to his job at Saskatoon.

The sign says: For Sale.

Clark first out of 1980 gate

OTTAWA (UPC) — Prime Minister Joe Clark will be the first party leader to launch the post-Christmas election drive with a speech to Conservative Party members in the capital tonight.

New Democratic Party leader Ed Broadbent will start up his election machinery Thursday in Ottawa and leave for a tour of Southern Ontario in the evening.

Travel plans for Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau had not been completed Monday but it is expected he will campaign in Quebec for the last part of the week before returning to Ottawa on Saturday.

Conservative aides were delighted by Clark's proposal to return to the John Diefenbaker style of campaigning — via train — that was common before the invention of the jet.

The Chief was famous for chugging through small prairie towns and speaking from the train caboose.

Clark will travel to and from Montreal by train, complete with his entourage of advisers, aides and members of the news media Thursday.

He will meet with Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau and address the Montreal Junior Chamber of Commerce before returning to Ottawa.

From the outset of the current election campaign, heavy holiday traffic had prevented the three parties from renting jets during the first week of January forcing organizers to use buses, trains and smaller planes.

Broadbent will address a luncheon meeting in Ottawa before heading to Toronto and Hamilton where he will speak at a party nomination meeting for the Hamilton Mountain riding.

Friday, the NDP leader's tour takes him to London and Windsor before returning to Toronto. Leaving Toronto Saturday for Sudbury, and returning the same day, Broadbent will address another nomination meeting to support longtime NDP MP John Rodriguez.

Sunday, former party leader David Lewis will address Broadbent's nomination meeting in the current party leader's constituency of Oshawa.

Tories' arrogance blamed

Tory arrogance, stupidity and indecision were cited as reasons for collapse of the government when Jim Manly was nominated NDP candidate in Cowichan-Malahat-the Islands constituency this week.

Manly, who was unopposed, said the Tories wasted time in office which should have been spent developing an intelligent energy policy that would take full advantage of Petrocan.

Answering Conservative claims that the NDP brought the government down, Manly said: "The Tories brought the government down on themselves by their bungling, oppressive measures. If the opposition had not brought them down, they would have brought the country down."

December was dark

The darkest December in a decade ended Monday, wetter but warmer than the same month a year ago.

Victoria had only 38.5 hours of sunshine compared with 98.8 hours in December, 1978 — the lowest monthly total since 1969.

FISSION EXPEDITION launched by a U.S.-based, pro-nuclear group is seeking to raise funds in the Toronto area, according to The Globe and Mail. Helen Obadia is seen here distributing pamphlets for The Fusion Energy Foundation, a lobby arm of the U.S. Labor Party.

Liberals most popular, December poll shows

TORONTO (CP) — A Gallup poll taken two weeks before the Progressive Conservative government fell shows the Liberal party with a 20-per-cent lead in voter popularity.

The poll by the Canadian Institute of Public Opinion, conducted Dec. 1 to 4, found support for the Tories had dropped one per cent from the November poll but the attitude of decided voters had not changed much during the one-month period.

Asked, "If a federal election were held today, which party's candidate do you think you would favor?" 47 per cent would vote Liberal, 27 per cent Conservative, 23 per cent for the New Democratic Party and three per cent for other parties.

A November Gallup poll showed the Liberals would take 47 per cent of the vote, the Conservatives 28 per cent, the NDP 23 per cent and other parties two per cent.

The polls show the Liberals and the NDP have made large gains since the May 22 election.

In that election, the Conservatives took 36 per cent of the popular vote, the Liberals 40 per cent, the NDP 18 per cent and other parties six per cent.

The December poll covered a sample of 1,002 voters. A sample of this size is accurate within four percentage points, 19 out of 20 times.

In response to a second question, fifty per cent of those polled said they were dissatisfied with the Conservative government's record in power, while 26 per cent said they were satisfied.

The question was: "Do you approve or disapprove of the record of the Conservative government in Ottawa?"

The November poll showed 47 per cent disapproved of Joe Clark's record while 29 per cent approved.

FP bid brings no response

TORONTO (CP) — The latest bid by Toronto financier Conrad Black for control of FP Publications Ltd. — reported to be about $119 million — has not drawn any response from rival bidder R. Howard Webster of Montreal.

"Webster has not, to my knowledge, extended or increased his offer," said Richard Shead, lawyer for the Sifton family, owners of a large block of FP stock.

Webster's offer, estimated at $109 million or about $7 million more than Black's original bid, was to expire Monday.

"We'll be looking at Mr. Black's offer . . . I can't comment until then," said William Ferguson, a spokesman for Webster and vice-president of Imperial Trust Co.

Shead said Black's offer, conditional upon receiving voting control, expires Jan. 11 and members of the Sifton family will meet in Toronto on Jan. 7 to consider the bid.

Domestic affairs King-sized woe

OTTAWA (CP) — Former prime minister W. L. Mackenzie King had more trouble running his private home after retirement than he had running the country, say government researchers who opened his 1949 personal diary to the public today.

"His retirement was complicated by the daily worries of running the households of Laurier House and Kingsmere," says a background paper on the diary.

One of his most often cited problems was getting good help. One maid was caught attempting to sneak her fiance into her bedroom and he believed another maid was stealing cigarettes from him.

Such domestic worries and constant lonliness apparently drove King, then 75, to ill health by the end of 1949.

"I never realized before how completely alone I am," wrote King, prime minister for 21 years.

His diary also contains dozens of accounts of seances, dreams and visions.

Most operators back as Bell dispute grows

TORONTO (CP) — Most Bell Canada operators in Ontario and Quebec returned to work today, ending a work stoppage to protest a company contract offer.

About 300 operators in Sherbrooke, Que., and the Ontario centres of Sudbury, Oshawa, Port Hope and Cornwall remained off the job, a company spokesman said.

The Communications Workers of Canada, which represents 6,900 operators and 500 cafeteria staff, has recommended that its members return to work until a strike vote is held.

Sunday, a union official said workers would begin a 48-hour strike Monday that would run through New Year's Day, but most operators jumped the gun and walked out on the weekend.

Union spokesman Bill Howes said operators in Oshawa and Sudbury had voted to stay of the job indefinitely.
more money.

"They haven't had a raise since November, 1977, and that's one of the reasons they're so militant," Howes said.

Operators in Toronto will meet Thursday and Friday to vote on the company's latest offer.

Alaska pipe plan 'popular'

OTTAWA (CP) — Recent events in Iran have made a natural gas pipeline through Canada from Alaska to major U.S. markets not just necessary but also popular, says Mitchell Sharp, Canada's pipelines commissioner.

In an interview, the former federal cabinet minister said the hostage-taking at the U.S. embassy in Iran and the uncertainty about energy supplies from the Middle East has made even those initially opposed to the pipeline project supporters of it.

". . . I don't know whether we're (Canada) going to attain energy self-sufficiency," Sharp said. "But we must make an enormous effort — so must every country in the world.

"To be so dependent upon that one bloc of countries, where the political situation is so uncertain, is simply to court disaster.

"That is one of the reasons why I don't think there can be any doubt now about the attitude of people towards the pipeline."

Sharp reviewed the troubles getting the pipeline project approved by the U.S. Congress — although it has been approved in principle by both recent Liberal and Progressive Conservative governments here.

But he said concern about secure sources of energy have changed the attitude of doubters in the U.S. to the extent that natural gas producers now are prepared to invest in the pipeline where they formerly were reluctant.

"It is no longer simply an interest of ours simply to get ahead with building the pipeline, which will largely be built by Canadians," Sharp said.

"The interest on the part of the American consumer and the American producer has become so much greater.

"This is the only project that holds out any hope of increased energy in the United States in the immediate future."

He said President Carter's hopes of using alternate energy sources to make the U.S. self-sufficient would only become viable far in the future.

"This line would promise the delivery of additional energy to U.S. consumers in 1985," he said.

Even with delays caused by the U.S. Congress, Sharp said construction could start on the southern section of the project next summer. A western leg to carry Alberta gas to California markets would be started in 1980 and an eastern leg to carry Alaska gas to Midwest U.S. markets would be started later.

Despite delays and inflation, Sharp said the $15-billion pipeline could be completed "at the end of 1984" and be ready to carry gas early in 1985.

He was careful to say these were optimistic estimates, especially concerning the eastern section since burying a gas transmission line through the delicate Arctic tundra from Alaska had never before been attempted.

Crosbie named man of the year

TORONTO (CP) — The Report on Business of The Globe and Mail has named Finance Minister John Crosbie as its 1979 man of the year.

The Report on Business said Crosbie emerged during the year as Canada's champion of economic realism and responsibility in government.

While his philosophy was not universally popular, Crosbie gained the respect of the financial community.

The newspaper said Crosbie's willingness to tackle problems has become Canada's best hope for making a successful adjustment to a harsh future.

Oil price increase almost painless

OTTAWA (UPC) — Consumers will not feel the pinch from the New Year's Day $1-a-barrel increase in the price of domestic crude oil until the end of February or early March, says an energy department spokesman.

"At the end of February, or early March, consumers will have to pay approximately 3.5 cents more a gallon for gasoline and heating oil," energy department spokesman Carl Mayhew said Monday.

"That's when existing supplies at the current selling price are expected to be depleted."

The latest price hike means the Canadian wellhead price of a barrel of crude will sell for $14.75 — approximately half the average world price charged by OPEC members.

The recent oil price increases announced by OPEC will not affect Canadian consumers directly.

Mayhew said the affect on consumers as a result of the OPEC increases "will be nil for the immediate future because of the federal government's oil compensation program."

The program makes up the difference between the domestic price and the import price to refiners, rather than pass the higher costs of the world-priced oil on to the consumer.

"While consumers won't feel the impact of those world price increases directly, they will have to pay them through taxes eventually. The impact of those higher prices — say a $2 a barrel increase by Venezuela — will also be partially offset by the $1 a barrel increase for domestic oil," Mayhew said.

The Conservative government, in its federal budget defeated Dec. 13, had considered implementing increases of $1 on Jan. 1, $2 on July 1, and another $1 a barrel on Jan. 1, 1981.

But under the existing agreement, signed by the Liberal government and the producing provinces, Tuesday's increase will be the last rise in a series of bi-annual price changes.

Canada imports 47 per cent of its total annual supply from Venezuela — the Caribbean nation announced a 45,000-barrel per day cutback to Canada over the weekend, but Imperial Oil said this would be made up from other sources — 35 per cent from Saudi Arabia, 7 per cent from Kuwait, 3 per cent from Algeria and 8 per cent from Iran and other world sources.

New drug can help cancer patients

EDMONTON (UPC) — A drug developed by the director of the University of Alberta's J.S. McEachern cancer research laboratory has shown "dramatic results" in the treatment of infections in cancer patients and of some cancers.

Dr. Gerald LePage, a 62-year-old cancer researcher, said Monday the compound, known as ARA-AMP, is still in the experimental stage, but has proved effective in attacking infection, the primary cause of death in most cancer patients.

"We started out on an emergency basis to treat patients who were in very perilous states . . . particularly children with leukemia who had either herpes infections or chicken pox and we found very dramatic results," LePage said.

Basically, the new compound works by interfering with the metabolism of growing cancer cells and, simultaneously, interfering with the growth of many viruses causing infection.

"Many of the (child leukemia) patients who were just massively infected with horrible rashes and so on cleared up in about four days just like magic," he said.

LePage also found that, following treatment with ARA-AMP, one patient's malignant skin tumor shrank by about 90 per cent.

Unlike other anti-cancer agents, ARA-AMP is not highly toxic and, of 85 patients treated with the compound, only two experienced severe nausea, LePage said.

McDermott message: vote NDP

OTTAWA (CP) — The New Democratic Party, with the only clearly identified philosopy and program, has emerged as the single choice for voters in the Feb. 18 federal election, Dennis McDermott, president of the Canadian Labor Congress, says in his New Year's message.

"It is also clear to most Canadians, whether or not they are trade unionists, that there is no choice between the Liberals who got us into the mess and the Conservatives who threatened to make the mess even worse," he said of the economic policies of the two larger parties.

McDermott said the Progressive Conservative government did nothing positive during its seven months in office, compounded problems by betraying most of its election promises and proposed a depression-oriented budget which "even the Liberals were unable to stomach.

"It is clear that nothing but an election could stop the Conservatives from blindly leading Canada into economic chaos and ruin.

Meanwhile in Toronto, Federal Health Minister David Crombie was released from hospital, two weeks after suffering a heart attack.

Crombie, MP for Toronto's Rosedale riding, went home for four to six weeks of rest and rehabilitation while his advisers planned his re-election campaign.

His campaign manager, Barb McDougall, said Crombie's medical progess will determine how much campaigning he can do before the Feb. 18 vote.

"I have to do some thinking over the next few days," the former Toronto mayor said as he left the hospital, adding that he intends to spend the next few weeks just recuperating.

Beaumark

Just launched. A new generation of appliances. Beaumark.

We'd like to invite you to a rare event: the introduction of a major new line of appliances.

We call the line Beaumark. You'll be hearing that name a lot in the future, because Beaumark is the appliance line built for the 80's.

We studied the competition.

Before we designed the Beaumark line of appliances, we took the competition apart, product by product, to see what was out there already.

Then, we asked consumers what was important to them in appliances. They stressed reliability, colour choice and features that save time and effort and aren't just cosmetic.

We learned a lot.

The result of our research is one of the most diversified appliance lines in the industry, a line more complete than many brands you've known for years. Beaumark: Eighteen models of ranges, both cook-top and built-in. Seven dishwashers, all with thorough 3-zone washing action. Ten freezers, including chest and upright. Fifteen energy-efficient refrigerators. Six washers and five matching dryers. Sixty-one models in all.

And, coming soon, dehumidifiers, air-conditioners and microwave ovens.

From our basic no-frills models to our most sophisticated appliances such as our modular range, Beaumark boasts colours to complement your decor, styling that's modern yet timeless, and sizes to fit your living space.

Beaumark appliances are built to be tough.

We back them up with a comprehensive written warranty covering parts and labour, and a network of service depots stretching from St. John's, Newfoundland to Victoria, B.C. We even provide service inside the Arctic Circle.

Quality tested.

In addition, each Beaumark appliance carries the Retail Research Foundation of Canada Quality Tested seal. Beautiful, reliable, affordable Beaumark appliances are now making their debut. Drop in and see them for yourself.

Splashdown '80: Bears for punishment

Peter Lank, 23, of James Bay, was the hardiest "polar bear" of them all on New Year's Day.

He stayed in chilly Beaver Lake for 20 minutes to win the Vancouver Island Netherland Association's trophy for the longest submersion.

This is the fifth year the association has sponsored the swim.

A total of 131 swimmers of all ages took part, some of them in bikinis.

The lake water was around five degrees Celsius, the air temperature about nine.

More than 2,000 spectators were on hand for the splash party.

The swimmers were a brave bunch but were quick to go for hot drinks and warm clothes once it was over.

Ed Kop, who presented the trophy, said it was difficult for the judges to decide who was the winner because of the confusion.

He said more stringent rules will be used next year to deal with the growing number of competitors.

Saskia Acton and Rachel Staples got a wide-angle view of the goings-on Watts wants opinions on future of Oak Bay

Oak Bay residents will be asked how they feel the municipality should be developed as the first step in drawing up a community plan, Mayor Doug Watts said today.

He said municipal officials have been meeting with the community plan consultants, Eikos Design Group Ltd. of Vancouver, to draw up a questionnaire which will be sent to residents.

"The key thing is to get viewpoints of everybody, including those who would be embarrassed to stand up at public meetings," Watts said.

The questionnaire is expected to go out in early March and the results will be tabulated in June.

In addition to the questions, Watts said a large space will be left on the questionnaire for residents to give their own views on what Oak Bay should be like in the coming years.

After the results have been analysed a start will be made on drawing up the plan.

When a draft is ready, public hearings will also be held to ensure that all viewpoints have been received.

WATTS

. . . survey in March

Important points in the plan will include preservation of parks, the retention of the integrity of residential areas and the Oak Bay Village, as well as the promotion of recreation events.

Watts expects Oak Bay to expand its role as a convenient residential area for the growing number of elderly people in Canada but to keep its vibrancy through the youth in the municipality.

Watts has stressed the need for a north-south bus route in Oak Bay to allow students to attend the University of Victoria and Camosun College without too many problems and also provide improved accessibilty to major shopping areas.

Eikos Design was hired last fall at an initial sum of $40,000 to help municipal officials prepare the community plan.

Voting at 18 asked

The 51st sesssion of the B.C. Youth Parliament has prorogued following four days of debate.

The 88-member parliament passed resolutions calling on the provincial government to lower the voting age to 18 years from 19; to eliminate discrepancies between the federal and provincial voting laws and to enact an election expenses act limiting campaign spending and requiring disclosure of all donations exceeding $100.

Braefoot gets grant

Saanich will receive $30,000 from the provincial government to help construct an all-weather sports field at Braefoot Park.

The grant is one of 47 grants, totalling $2,183,122, for recreation projects

Small airlines throw block at Pattison

The Jim Pattison Group's attempt to corner the West Coast airline industry apparently has encountered resistance from smaller airlines that were supposed to be swallowed up in the Pattison expansion.

In separate developments this week, the small airlines have indicated they no longer want to sell out and are prepared to continue operating on their own.

The operator of Tyee Air's float plane service to the Sechelt Peninsula is suing West Coast Air Services Ltd., now owned by the Pattison group, for allegedly reneging on a takeover deal.

In another development a takeover agreement between Pacific Coastal Airlines and Jim Pattison Industries was terminated Tuesday by Pattison.

In the Tyee-West Coast battle, Al Campbell, founder and president of Tyee Air, which has a fleet of seven single-engined float planes, claims that Cromarty Holdings, Ltd. has failed to honor an agreement of sale signed in June, 1979.

Cromarty, formed by a group of B.C. and Alberta businessmen, acquired West Coast last January and began a battle with Pattison for the major share of B.C.'s small airlines.

Pattison acquired Airwest in March and went on to acquire a clutch of other coastal operations. Meanwhile, Cromarty attempted a similar move through West Coast. Pattison outmanoeuvred its opposition, however, and Cromarty capitulated, selling West Coast to its rival.

Campbell, who with his wife, owns Tyee Air, says he now doesn't want to sell to anybody, especially West Coast, and plans to go it alone.

Pacific Coastal, which seized the major share of traffic between Nanaimo and Vancouver airports but was sold to Pattison during the Pattison-West Coast battle, apparently has similar thoughts and no longer wants to sell to Pattison.

In a news release Tuesday owner Don McGillivary said the airline plans to intervene on applications by Airwest (Pattison) before the Canadian Transport Commission for routes served by Pacific Coastal.

Q. Is Paul Bunyan a Canadian or American mythical hero? F.C.

A. Paul Bunyan's origin is controversial. U.S. writer Daniel G. Hoffman has derided theories that Bunyan originated in New Brunswick. But Canadian research indicates the legends of Bunyan were introduced in the U.S. by New Brunswick lumberjacks who worked in Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota and as loggers in Oregon. It seems Bunyan was an Indian mythical demigod who later became part of French Canadian folklore as "Tit" Jean or Jean Bonhomme.

Report Thursday on racquet club

A confidential report on the viability of the Victoria Racquet Club as a municipal enterprise will be discussed in-camera Thursday by Saanich council.

Ald. Howard Sturrock, who prepared the report at the request of Mayor Mel Couvelier, said today he can't release details.

The report contains recommendations for the future use of the financially-troubled club, he said.

Sturrock said he knows of two or three proposals from the private sector for future use of the site, not necessarily as a recreational facility.

Finance Minister Hugh Curtis said earlier this week he knows of at least one proposal by a group of local business people that will be presented to council this month.

Shareholders decided to dispose of the club's assets after they were told by the owner, Racquet Club of Victoria Holdings, is insolvent.

Sturrock chaired a committee which looked into the possibility of the municipality taking over the Gordon Head facility.

He met before Christmas with goverment officials to apply for a provincial grant to help buy it.

Curtis said he doesn't believe there is money available for the purchase.

Stavdal to gov't

The man who has headed the community relations section of the Greater Victoria School District for the past 10 years is quitting at the end of January to go to the the provincial government.

Bill Stavdal will be manager of information services for the human resources ministry.

Stavdal, 46, was education reporter with the Colonist for five years before he joined the school district.

Gov't runs art classes

The popular children's art classes in the Emily Carr house on Government Street have resumed under direct provincial government sponsorship.

Tom Fielding, director of the cultural services branch in the provincial secretary's ministry, said today instructor Millie Shapiro of Oak Bay is giving Tuesday morning classes for pre-school children.

Before the Emily Carr Arts Centre Society lost its lease on the artist's birthplace at 207 Government, Bill and Rosalie Bowie offered similar art classes for yongsters.

Fielding said the new classes, like the Bowies', will start at 10:30 a.m. with a fee of 50 cents to cover materials.

They began just before Christmas and after a holiday hiatus of two weeks will start again next Tuesday.

The organizers are aiming at three to five-year-olds but are flexible on age limits — previously, children as young as 18 months had been part of the Bowies' class.

FIELDING

The first class is limited to eight children and is already full, but if demand warrants more may be offered. For information, call 387-6080.

Meanwhile, Fielding said there have been more than two dozen suggestions in response to the provincial secretary's recent newspaper ad asking the public to submit ideas on what the old house should be used for.

Fielding's office is trying to put together a program for the Carr house using the public suggestions.

Jacqueline Louise snoozes away New Year's Day

Another piper blows in

Pipe major Jamie Troy has really something to pipe about these days.

He and his wife, Louise, are proud parents of the first baby born in Victoria this year.

Jacqueline Louise arrived at 5:05 a.m. at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

"She better like the pipes," her father quipped today.

Troy, of 2591 Prior, is pipe major of the City of Victoria Pipe Band. The 20-man band was sixth in the world championships in England last year.

Jacqueline, who weighed in at 3,200 grams (seven punds, three ounces) was well off the mark for first-baby-of-the-year-in-B.C. honors. That went to seven pound, half-ounce Darragh, the son of Mary and Declan Rooney of North Vancouver who arrived at 15 seconds after midnight in Vancouver's St. Paul's Hospital.

Second baby of the year in Victoria was born to Dianne Couch at 6:42 a.m. Susan Lewis had the third at 7:10 a.m. Both were girls.

Who is No. 1? Result known tonight

By The Associated Press

Who's No. 1 in United States college football? Let the arguments begin.

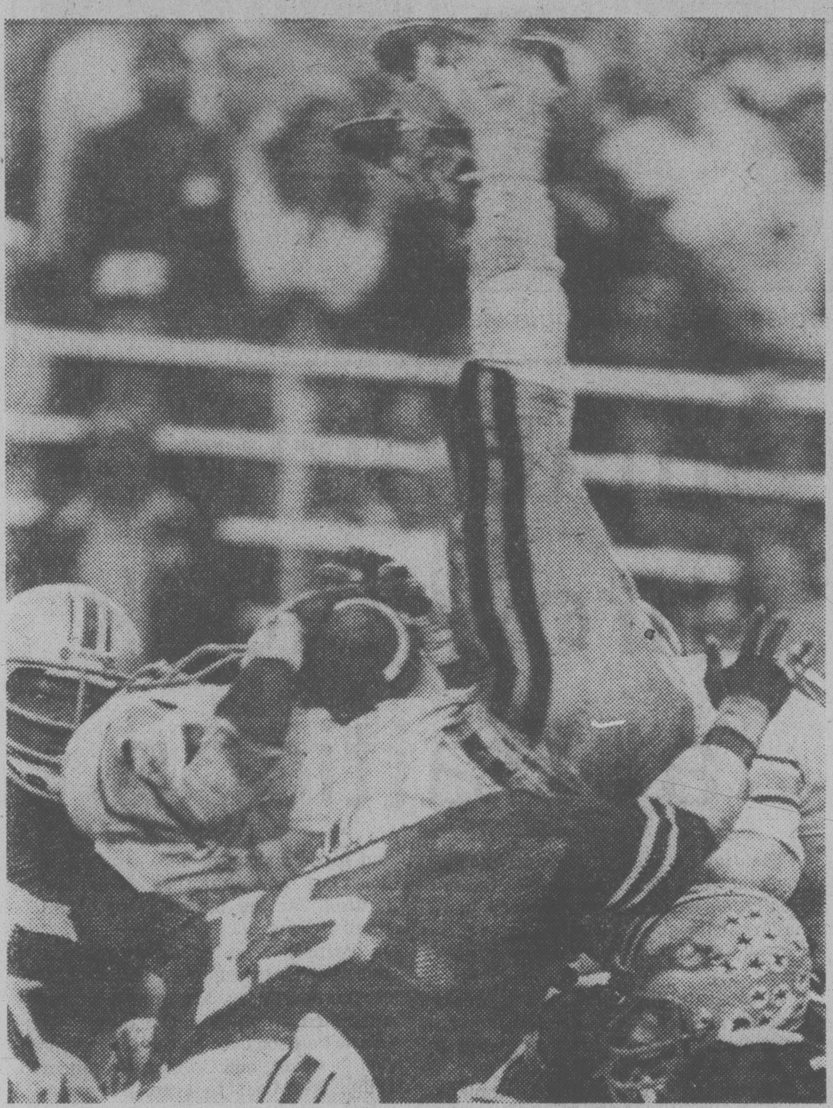
Regardless of who finishes at the top of The Associated Press's final poll, which is scheduled to be announced tonight, there will be plenty of debate about which is the best team. In fact, it appears to be a classic case of deja vu.

Just as in last season's final poll, Alabama and Southern California have the inside track to the top.

The defending champion Crimson Tide, ranked No. 2, eased past Arkansas 24-9 in the Sugar Bowl, while the third-ranked Trojans took a tougher route to victory on New Year's Day, edging No. 1-ranked Ohio State 17-16 in the Rose Bowl.

Alabama was No. 1 in the United Press poll.

In the other major bowl games Tuesday, Houston rallied to beat Nebraska 17-14 in the Cotton Bowl and Oklahoma stopped Florida State 24-7 in the Orange Bowl.



USC's Charlie White goes over the top for winning touchdown over Ohio State in Rose Bowl

Football Foundation picks Tide

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — No matter what the polls decide, Alabama's 24-9 Sugar Bowl victory over Arkansas has convinced the National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame that the Crimson Tide is No. 1.

The foundation awarded Alabama its MacArthur Bowl on Tuesday — the second year in a row Alabama has won it.

"Alabama proved itself to be the nation's best team in 1979, extending its winning streak to 21 consecutive games with a decisive victory over a very good Arkansas team," said Vincent dePaul Draddy, the foundation's chairman of the board.

In its announcement, the foundation noted that, after Tuesday's three other bowl games, Alabama was the nation's only undefeated and untied team.

Alabama won the MacArthur Bowl in 1978 after defeating Penn State in the Sugar Bowl.

Rose Bowl

USC in dramatic win

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Southern California coach John Robinson was flinging superlatives around with abandon following his team's dramatic Rose Bowl victory.

He called the game one of the greatest, Charles White the best football player he's ever seen and the class of Trojan senior players the finest in the history of the Pacific-10 Conference school.

Robinson would not, however, call his Trojans the best college football team in the land.

"We deserve consideration for No. 1," Robinson said Tuesday after third-ranked USC's 17-16 victory over Ohio State. "Alabama deserves consideration. We are two great football teams."

Ohio State coach Earle Bruce, who saw a perfect season and a possible national championship fade away when the White-led Trojans scored the winning touchdown with 1:32 remaining in the contest, said: "I said all along that the winner of this game should be the national champion."

Buckeyes quarterback Art Schlichter, who turned in an outstanding performance in the losing effort, said: "I can't vote in the poll, but USC played a great game and deserves to be No. 1."

White, the Trojans' Heisman Trophy-winning tailback, gained 247 yards and scored Southern Cal's final touchdown on a one-yard dive.

USC quarterback Paul McDonald, who provided USC's other touchdown with a 53-yard scoring pass to Kevin Williams, said: "All the players on the team feel that we're No. 1. We've come back so many times against adversity and that's the sign of a champion."

Wherever the Trojans finish in the final poll, they must surely rank at the top as far as confidence goes. Down 16-10 to the 7½-point underdog Buckeyes with just 5:21 remaining in the game, Southern Cal took the ball at its own 17-yard line and marched cooly down the field to the winning score.

White began the decisive drive with a 32-yard burst, ran for another 28 yards on the next play, then finally capped the thrust by somersaulting into the end zone. Eric Hipp then kicked the point-after for the winning margin.

"I didn't feel like I was carrying the load on the last drive," said White, who had a total of 39 carries in the contest, with both that and his rushing yardage Rose Bowl records. "If they were going to stop us, they were going to have to stop 11 of us. "That's our game, to wear the other guy down."

Schlichter, the outstanding sophomore who completed 11 of his 21 throws for 297 yards against the Trojans, reflected the Buckeyes' disappointment following the loss.

"It's a big letdown," said Schlichter, who connected with Gary Williams on a 67-yard scoring pass to even the game at 10-10 just before halftime. "We had a shot at the national championship and we didn't get it.

With a crowd of 105,526 and a national television in both the United States and Canada looking on, Southern Cal took a 3-0 lead on a 41-yard field goal by Hipp in the opening quarter.

McDonald's touchdown pass to Williams six minutes into the second quarter gave the Trojans a 10-0 lead, but Ohio State stormed back on a 35-yard field goal by Vlade Janakievski and Schlichter's scoring pass to Williams with 21 seconds left in the half.

Janakievski gave Ohio State the lead for the first time when he kicked a 37-yard field goal in the opening moments of the third quarter, then made it 16-10 with a 24-yarder early in the final period.

Sugar Bowl

Tide 'almost perfect'

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — For the third year in a row, Alabama is sweating out the vote in The Associated Press college football poll.

But if the Alabama and Arkansas players were doing the voting, there would be no doubt about United States' college football champion.

"Alabama deserves to be No. 1," Arkansas quarterback Kevin Scanlon said after the second-ranked Crimson Tide trounced the sixth-rated Razorbacks 24-9 Tuesday in the Sugar Bowl. "If you don't vote for them as No. 1, you've got to be crazy."

But Alabamians feel they have been burned enough times — including runner-up finishes behind Notre Dame in 1977 and Ohio State in this year's final regular-season poll — not to take anything for granted.

Still, there was unbridled joy in the Alabama team's hotel Tuesday evening after third-ranked Southern California edged top-rated and previously unbeaten Ohio State 17-16 in the Rose Bowl, while fifth-ranked Oklahoma trimmed undefeated Florida State 24-7.

The television set in Bryant's room was tuned to the Rose Bowl, but the legendary 66-year-old coach insisted he wasn't "paying any attention" to it. But you know had to know he was.

When someone broke a long gainer, he exclaimed: "Nobody'd run through us like that."

Eventually he conceded that "from what I've seen so far, I think we're No. 1."

All Alabama can do now is await the result of The AP poll tonight to see whether the Crimson Tide has won its second consecutive national championship. If not, they will have to be content with a 12-0 record — its first perfect mark since 1966 — and a 21-game winning streak, longest in the country, as well as an all-time Alabama record.

Alabama's Don McNeal fumbled the opening kickoff away at his own 25, but Arkansas had to settle for Ish Ordonez's 34-yard field goal. For the most part after that, it was all Alabama. Major Ogilvie, named the game's outstanding player, scored on runs of 22 and one yard in the first period and set up Alan McElroy's 25-yard field goal with a 50-yard punt return late in the second quarter. Ogilvie's first touchdown capped an 82-yard drive and the second, less than three minutes later, came after linebacker Thomas Boyd recovered a fumble by Scanlon at the Arkansas 22.

Arkansas controlled the third quarter, scoring on Scanlon's three-yard pass to Robert Farrell to end an 80-yard drive following the kickoff. But Alabama stormed right back with a magnificent 98-yard, nine-play drive in the final period, ending in Steve Whitman's 12-yard touchdown run.

Arkansas coach Lou Holtz was convinced.

"Little did I realize that the best football team in the country would play an almost perfect game," he said. "Alabama just made the big play. They are a big, strong, physical football team. They run many different defences. We were confused and we had some missed assignments, but that is a credit to Alabama.

"We just got beat by a better football team.

Orange Bowl

Florida State streak ends

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Quarterback J. C. Watts, concerned about fifth-ranked Oklahoma's lackadaisical first-quarter effort, instructed his offence to "get it going" in the second period — then did it himself.

The Sooners' signal-caller streaked 61 yards for a game-tying, second-quarter touchdown and free safety Bud Hebert set up another score 36 seconds later with the first of his three pass interceptions as Oklahoma rallied to beat previously-unbeaten Florida State 24-7 in the Orange Bowl football game Tuesday night.

The victory enabled the Sooners to snap fourth-ranked Florida State's 15-game winning streak.

"I felt like we were just kind of dead through the first quarter," said Watts, named the most valuable offensive player after rushing for 127 yards on 15 carries and engineering an awesome Wishbone attack that amassed 411 yards on the ground.

"When we jumped out to a 17-7 lead, that took the steam out of them," said Watts.

All-American Billy Sims, the 1978 Heisman Trophy winner, said he expected a team-mate to have a good game because "every place I went, they had three guys on me and that took the pressure off everybody else.

"J. C. had a good game," added Sims, who scored once and rushed for 164 yards.

Coach Barry Switzer, lifting his seven-year record at Oklahoma to 73-7-2, said: "I thought the speed of our defence was the difference."

A dejected Florida State coach Bobby Bowden said: "I was very disappointed in the outcome because I thought we were more ready than they would have been. I don't think they were taking us seriously. We were well prepared."

Bowden said he thought the turning point came early in the second quarter when Florida State failed to capitalize on a blocked punt that could have given the Seminoles a 10-0 or 14-0 lead at the time.

Oklahoma, 11-1, built its 17-7 lead in the second quarter on Watts's long run, a five-yard touchdown dash by Stanley Wilson following Hebert's first interception, and a 24-yard field goal by Michael Keeling following a shanked 14-yard punt by Rohn Stark at the Seminoles' 40.

The Sooners got their final score with just under two minutes remaining in the game when Watts raced 12 yards around right end and pitched out to Sims, who covered the final 22 for the touchdown.

Cotton Bowl

Houston gets some help

DALLAS (AP) — Just when it appeared they would be disappointed in the Cotton Bowl for the second year in a row, Houston Cougars got help "from above" for a last-gasp touchdown and a 17-14 win over Nebraska.

"Somebody upstairs was watching out for me on that pass and for the UH team all season," said a jubilant Eric Herring after the junior flanker caught Terry Elston's six-yard tipped pass for the winning touchdown with 12 seconds to play Tuesday.

The Southwest Conference champions saw a 34-12 lead disappear last year in the final seven minutes when Notre Dame charged back for a 35-34 victory as time expired.

This time, Nebraska claimed a Houston fumble on the Cougars' 31 and quarterback Jeff Quinn — after an abortive trick play — hit tight end Jeff Finn for a six-yard touchdown pass and a 14-10 lead with less than four minutes to play.

But backup quarterback Elston — voted the game's offensive most valuable player — saved the game with a 13-play, 66-yard drive he wrapped up with a clutch, fourth-down, needle-sharp pass through two Nebraska defenders.

Elston hit Herring three times for 10, 11 and 15 yards to give the Cougars a first down at the Nebraska nine-yard line. On fourth-and-goal from six yards out, with 19 seconds left, Elston called "R-Flex 333-Hook," dropped back and hit Herring drifting across the middle.

The ball tipped off a defender's arm and into Herring's hands for the touchdown.

It was the seventh time in an 11-1 season that the Cougars came from behind to win.

Lanny produces quickly to help Rockies end skid

By The Canadian Press

Tim Young and Al MacAdam scored goals 25 seconds apart in the third period to boost Minnesota North Stars to a 4-2 National Hockey League victory over Pittsburgh Penguins Monday night.

Young, with his second goal of the game and 15th of the season, broke a 2-2 tie at 3:21 of the third period when he slipped in a rebound past goalie Greg Millen. MacAdam, who also had two assists, hammered in a shot from the left faceoff circle for his 19th goal of the year at 3:46.

Young and rookie Tom McCarthy scored in the first period for Minnesota.

The Penguins countered in the second period on goals by Ross Lonsberry and Orest Kindrachuk to tie the game.

The Penguins, continually stymied by Minnesota goalie Gilles Meloche, finished with a 33-31 edge in shots, but the North Stars blitzed them 14-4 in the final period.

In other games, Buffalo Sabres beat Winnipeg Jets 6-2 and Colorado Rockies downed Detroit Red Wings 5-3.

Recently-acquired Lanny McDonald and Ron Delorme both scored two goals to spark Colorado over Detroit. The decision ended Colorado's five-game losing streak on the road and handed Detroit its seventh defeat in its last 11 games.

McDonald was playing his second game for the Rockies after being traded from Toronto Maple Leafs last Friday.

George Lyle, called up Monday morning from Glens Falls, N.Y., of the American League, scored two goals for the Red Wings in his first NHL game. Dale McCourt also scored for Detroit.

Danny Gare scored three goals to pace Buffalo over Winnipeg. Gil Perreault, John Gould and Rick Martin also scored for the Sabres, who outshot the Jets 42-24. Morris Lukowich and Lyle Moffat each scored a goal for Winnipeg.

Injuries cut Cougars down to three lines

For Victoria Cougars, 1979 was a good year. The Western Hockey League squad finished the first-half campaign with a 27-9 won-lost record and an eight-point hold on first place in the Western Division.

They went through the first 36 games with coach Jack Shupe using four lines, and that is one of the rarest accomplishments ever noted in major junior hockey.

"I've never seen anything like it," gloated Ron Lyons, hired by the club this year as marketing manager after similar assignments with Portland Winter Hawks, New Westminster Bruins and Vancouver Blazers of the defunct World Association. "And I've been around since day one."

"It is practically unheard of, in junior hockey, to go with four lines all the time. Sure, our third and fourth lines are short-shifted when there are penalties or power plays, but the rest of the time they've taken their regular turns.

"It really is remarkable," he hummed.

Lyons made his point last week. This week, as a result of two injuries suffered in Victoria's 4-1 victory over the Bruins in New Westminster, Shupe and the Cougars may be forced to start the New Year without four complete attacking lines for one of the rare times this season.

Winger Bud McCarthy suffered a slight concussion and shoulder bruise and centre Daryl Coldwell injured his rib cage. Coldwell is expected to sit out for at least a week while McCarthy falls into the doubtful category for Victoria's next game — Thursday's Memorial Arena confrontation with the Eastern Division-leading Calgary Wranglers.

"I guess," conceded Shupe "it may be one of the rare times when I'll have to fall back to three lines, especially if McCarthy can't play."

The injuries come at a most inopportune time. Cougars face second-place Portland Winter Hawks here Saturday and then meet Skelleftea of Sweden in an exhibition game Monday before taking off for a five-game Prairie road trip next week.

Skelleftea made an impressive start in its B.C. tour by clipping Abbotsford Flyers 5-4 Sunday, outshooting the B.C. Junior League squad 41-27.

Junior reps settle for fifth at Helsinki

HELSINKI (AP) — Canada's Peterboro Petes dumped West Germany 6-1 today to wrap up fifth spot at the World junior hockey championships.

Canada led 1-0 after the first period and 5-0 after the second.

It was Canada's third straight win after losing their first three.

Larry Murphy's goal at 14:04 of the second period snapped a 2-2 tie and Carmen Cirella added another score early in the third period that secured a 4-2 Canadian victory over the United States Tuesday.

Yvan Joly and Dave Beckon scored the other Canadian goals on Tuesday. Mike Lauen and Brian Mullen replied for the Americans, who twice came from one-goal deficits to tie the game.

The Soviet Union took a clear lead in the medals play, drubbing Czechoslovakia 6-2. The Soviets are 2-0 while the Czechs lost their second straight.

In another championship game, Finland downed Sweden 3-2 to bring its record to 1-1, the same as Sweden.

Canadien victory morale booster

MONTREAL (CP) — The touring Soviet Union's Central Red Army hockey team renewed an old acquaintance on New Year's Eve but Montreal Canadiens defenceman Larry Robinson found one thing different about the reunion.

"This time we won," grinned Robinson after the National Hockey League club scored a 4-2 exhibition triumph over Red Army, the top club in the Soviet Union's major hockey league.

The Canadiens required a pair of third-period goals by Steve Shutt and another by Bob Gainey to rebound from a 2-1 deficit which had been created when Viktor Zhluktov and Helmut Balderis fired second-period goals for Red Army.

Yvon Lambert had provided Montreal with a 1-0 lead at 16:36 of the first period, a 20-minute span in which the Canadiens outshot Red Army 13-3.

The Canadiens continued their domination in the second period until netminder Richard Sevigny fanned on Balderis's soft shot from inside the blueline to give the Russian squad the lead for the only time in the game.

"We knew we let down in the second period," said Shutt. "In the dressing room between periods we told ourselves that we had to come out and play the same kind of game we did in the first period. And we came right back at them in the third."

Shutt, setting the example for his teammates, beat goaltender Vladislav Tretiak from close range at 3:38, and got his stick on Serge Savard's drive from the point at 12:10 to give the Canadiens an important insurance goal.

The play of Red Army even had the normally placid Tretiak shaking his head.

"I wasn't pleased with the way half of our team played," he said.

Gainey, named Montreal's outstanding player in the game, agreed that Red Army was not at its best.

"We could see that they really didn't have it tonight. It's probably the worst game they've played on the tour. Their game is won at centre ice, and that's where we beat them tonight."

Sevigny felt that the response of the 16,889 fans, who gave the Canadiens a prolonged standing ovation at the start of the game, was a big lift for the Stanley Cup champions, who have struggled in the NHL this season.

"It's a big morale booster," admitted Robinson.

Czechs beaten

CALGARY (CP) — Canada's Olympic hockey squad, rebounding in recent days from earlier disappointments, disposed of the touring Czechoslovakian nationals 5-1 in an exhibition game New Year's Day.

The Czechoslovaks, not their country's top national team, had a fair share of the play and had 29 shots on net compared with the Canadians' 33. But Paul Pageau provided steady goaltending all the way for Canada, while the Czechoslovaks went through two goalies, Milan Kolisek and Karel Lang.

The Canadian team, near the end of months of work leading up toward the winter Olympic Games in Lake Placid, N.Y., came up with an all-round effort.

Kevin Maxwell, Dave Hindmarch Jim Nill, Stelio Zupancich and Kevin Primeau scored for the Canadians before Vitezslav Duris spoiled Pageau's shutout bid at 3:08 of the final period.

Yea, and Yeovil's back with threat of surprise

LONDON (AP) — Tiny Yeovil Town, the non-league soccer club with a reputation for giant-killing, is back on the English FA Cup glory trail.

The Alliance Premier League team with the famous sloping pitch entertains First Division's Norwich City in the third round Saturday, and the whole of the west country market town is talking about the possibility of a major upset.

Yeovil has scored 13 previous Cup victories over league teams, including Sunderland and Arsenal. Team manager Barry Lloyd, a former Chelsea and Fulham player, is convinced his current team can cause another sensation.

"Our record in non-league socer is second to none. They will have to let us into the Football League if we win this one," said Lloyd.

More than 15,000 fans will pack Yeovil's Huish Ground for Saturday's match against Norwich, currently fifth in the First Division and challenging hard for a place in Europe.

The Yeovil-Norwich tie is just one of a number of intriguing third round ties. The magic of Cup lies in the chance it gives small clubs to upset the big boys, and there is usually at least one major surprise.

Altrincham, the Alliance league club which last year held First Division Tottenham to a draw, entertains Orient of the Second Division and, like Yeovil, will be looking for a win to improve its claim for league status.

Little Chesham United is at home to Second Division Cambridge United, which has scored just one away win in the league this season, while Harlow — which beat Third Division Southend in the second round — is away to another Second Division team, Leicester City.

The draw has also thrown up two potentially-thrilling clashes between top First Division teams.

Last year's beaten finalist, Manchester United, is away to long-time rival Tottenham, while European champion Nottingham Forest visits Leeds United.

Cup holder Arsenal faces a tricky trip to Wales to play Cardiff City, while league leader Liverpool is at home to Third Division Grimsby Town, which reached the quarter-finals of the League Cup before losing a marathon three-match series to Wolverhampton.

A number of First Division clubs face Second Division opposition and teams like Bolton, away to Sunderland; Crystal Palace, away to Swansea; Southampton, away to Birmingham; and Wolves, away to Notts County, will all need to be on their toes.

Solaita switches to Japanese club

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — First-baseman Tony Solaita, who played last season with Montreal Expos and Toronto Blue Jays, has signed a multi-year contract with Nippon Hamfighters of the Japanese Baseball League.

Solaita, 32, has played with five clubs in seven major league seasons. He has a lifetime major league batting average of .255.

SPARTANBURG, S.C. (AP) — A 20-year-old Spartanburg boxer died Tuesday afternoon from head injuries he suffered in the ring Dec. 22, authorities said.

Deputy Coroner Smith Thomas said the cause of death was a blood clot on the brain.

Seven-year ban for one driver; two out for five

CLOVERDALE — One harness race driver has been suspended for seven years and two other drivers for five years following an investigation of an alleged race "fix" at Cloverdale Raceway on Nov. 5.

Suspensions were announced by the B.C. Racing Commission for participating in, and concealing information concerning, the alleged fixing of the 10th race on Nov. 5 when Game Gent, an 11-1 shot, won and the triactor returned $856.40.

Roger Provencher, who drove the favored Lebret to a fifth-place finish, was handed the seven-year suspension.

Jean Marc Bouvier, who drove the fourth-place favorite B.C. Canada to a fourth-place finish, and Rene Bourgeois, who finished sixth with the second favorite, Claybrook Barry, were given five-year suspensions.

Sharkey The Great, at 3¼-1, was second in the race and Burndels Mr. Huff, 11-1, was third.

The drivers allegedly drove in a manner that would not permit their horses to win.

The three drivers had been suspended indefinitely at the beginning of December pending completion of the commission's investigation.

All three have appealed their suspensions.

Drivers Sten Ericsson and Doug Ferguson, who did not participate in the race, each were fined $1,500 on Dec. 26 and suspended for 30 days.

Owners Doug Booth and Norman Lapierre are also under indefinite suspension pending a recommendation to be heard by the commission that their licences be revoked for two years.

Racing commission secretary Robert E. Collis said the four were being penalized for "misleading the judges during the investigation and benefitting from information and knowledge of the alleged "fix".

Regional prosecutor Al Hoem is reported as saying he has discussed the investigation with the commission, but does not anticipate laying charges.

Collis said the commission judges decided the race had been fixed after viewing video tapes and making inquiries.

The triactor is a wager where the bettor must select the first three horses in the correct order of finish and is held on the final race each racing day at the Cloverdale meeting.

Fans raid turnstiles

HAMILTON, Bermuda (Reuter) — Angry soccer fans raided the turnstiles and grabbed $2,000 in entrance money when a visiting United States team stormed off the field at the National Stadium on Tuesday.

Alabama University was a goal behind when its right back Ben Okocha was sent off for a foul in the 15th minute. When the referee refused to change his decision, the Americans ran off the field under a barrage of beer bottles and catcalls.

Police said sections of the crowd raided cash boxes at the turnstiles and took the money.

After a 20-minute delay, Alabama agreed to resume the match and went on to beat Bermuda's leading club side, Hotels International, by 4-2.

Rams refuse to forget last visit to Tampa Bay

By Associated Press

Fourteen Sundays ago, Tampa Bay Buccaneers recorded a 21-6 victory over Los Angeles Rams.

It was just another game on the National Football League schedule, raising the Buccaneers' record to 4-0 and dropping the Rams to 2-2. But football players, like most athletes, have remarkably long memories.

Take Los Angeles cornerback Pat Thomas. He looked ahead to Sunday's National Conference title game against the Buccaneers and said: "I'm glad to be going back to play those guys after what they did to us."

That's just what bothers Tampa Bay linebacker Dewey Selmon.

"You have to take that team very seriously the next time around," Selmon said Tuesday. "They will be fired up. They will want revenge against you. And you tend to gear yourself for a harder battle."

The Rams, who upended Dallas Cowboys to reach the NFC title match, promise that tougher battle — though they have been in five such championship games in the last seven years and lost every one of them.

"Everybody's aware we've never gotten past the second (playoff) game," said centre Rich Saul, a member of all seven Los Angeles NFC West champions. "You can't worry about the past, though."

But Selmon can look to the future.

"We can't relax against them for two reasons," he said. "One, we played them before. And two, we beat them."

A third reason would be that the winner of the NFC clash will advance to the Super Bowl against the winner of the American Conference title game between Pittsburgh Steelers and Houston Oilers.

"Los Angeles is an experienced team," Selmon said. "They have a lot more to gain — not only a shot at the Super Bowl, but revenge against us."

The Oilers didn't have to wait as long for revenge against the Steelers. Houston answered its 38-7 loss at Pittsburgh with a 20-17 home triumph Dec. 10, and Steelers coach Chuck Noll hasn't forgotten that.

"We have a great deal of respect for Houston," said Noll, who watched the Oilers beat San Diego Chargers last Saturday in the AFC semi-final.

Along with respect, the Steelers have six consecutive AFC Central crowns, a 35-7 victory in the AFC title match against Houston last year, and three Super Bowl titles in the last five years.

But Noll still isn't making any forecasts about Sunday's contest.

"I am not in the predicition business," he said. "I am in the competition business."

Neither is Bum Phillips, coach of the injury-plagued Oilers, who was expected to find out today whether Houston will be without quarterback Dan Pastorini, running back Earl Campbell and receiver Ken Burrough.

Leg fractured, but Ram star just 'doubtful'

By Associated Press

There is a hairline fracture in Jack Youngblood's left fibula, which is the same as saying the all-pro defensive end of Los Angeles Rams has a broken leg.

That sounds serious and because of it, Youngblood is listed as doubtful for Sunday's National Football League conference championship game against Tampa Bay Buccaneers. He's not out, you understand. Just doubtful.

Losing a player of Youngblood's ability would be devastating for most teams but for the Rams this season, it would almost seem routine. Los Angeles has learned to live with bumps and bruises and would go with Reggie Doss, a seldom-used backup, to replace Youngblood against Tampa Bay, if necessary, in the National Conference showdown.

Even though 18 Los Angeles players have missed one game or more because of injury and six have been sidelined for the season, the defensive line had been relatively healthy until Youngblood went down in the first half against Dallas Cowboys. He had the leg taped and played on it in the second half, making one vital tackle of Cowboys quarterback Roger Staubach.

The injuries were a major reason for the Rams' lacklustre 9-7 regular season record — poorest of any of the NFL playoff team.

But that record and the depressing string of injuries were forgotten in the afterglow of the Rams' upset of Dallas which propelled LA into the championship game.

The Rams' victory was one of three upsets which scrambled the NFL playoff picture. In the others, Tampa Bay stung Philadelphia Eagles and the crippled Houston Oilers topped San Diego Chargers. Only powerful Pittsburgh Steelers avoided an upset, mauling Miami Dolphins as expected. That put the Steelers in the American Conference title game against the Oilers while the Rams face the Bucs.

If the Rams are troubled about the condition of Youngblood, they couldtake solace from Houston.

The Oilers, after all, lost three important starters — rushing champion Earl Campbell, quarterback Dan Pastorini and wide receiver Ken Burrough —, and still survived against San Diego.

Houston hopes to have those three back for Sunday's game.

A year ago, Pittsburgh destroyed Houston 34-5 in the title game and moved on to win its third Super Bowl erown.

Australia crashes to 10-wicket defeat

MELBOURNE (AP) — Australia crashed to a humiliating 10-wicket defeat by the West Indies in the second test at the Melbourne Cricket Grounds.

West Indies opening batsman Desmond Haynes hit the winning runs, a four, in the mid-afternoon.

Earlier, the West Indies had dismissed Australia in its second innings for 259, leaving it only 19 runs to win its first test match at the MCG in 50 years.

Australia scored 156 in its first innings to which the West indies replied with 397.

West Indies batsman vivian Richards won the man-of-the-match award for his first-innings 96.

Vice-captain Kim Hughes paced batsmen in Australia's second innings with 70, while opener Bruce Laird hit 69.

But they had little support as the four West Idies pace bowlers attacked wickets.

Knicks get close

By Canadian Press

At this stage of the National Basketball Association season, New York Knicks' prime objective is the break-even point, and on the strength of their fifth victory in six games Tuesday night, they're almost there.

The Knicks, led by their blossoming backcourt of Michael Ray Richardson and Ray Williams, played two superb quarters and it was enough to beat the defenceless San Antonio Spurs 128-120 and improve their record to 20-21.

"It's nice to be the league leader in assists and steals," Richardson said. "But I'm not worried about individual statistics. I just want to help us win. There's no way we should be under .500."

Richardson had 21 points, 17 assists and four steals, while Williams tied rookie centre Bill Cartwright for team scoring honors with 27 points.

Forward Toby Knight chipped in 21 points to offset San Antonio's high-scoring backcourt of James Silas and George Gervin, who had 34 and 33 points.

In Tuesday night's only other game, Portland Trail Blazers beat Washington Bullets 109-99.

For years the Spurs have been criticized for playing ineffectual defence and now San Antonio coach Doug Moe says the critics are right, at least when the team is on the road.

The Spurs, who lead the league in scoring but also allow the most points, have lost six of their last seven road starts. For the season, the defending Central Division champions are 7-15 away from home and just 19-20 over-all.

"Every road game we get blitzed," said Moe.

At Portland, Maurice Lucas and Abdul Jeelani led a fourth-quarter rally that propelled the Trail Blazers to their first victory in four games. Lucas scored 16 points in the final quarter en route to a game-high 28 points, while Jeelani came off the bench to score 12 of his 14 points in the final period when the Blazers outscored the Bullets 40-17.

Niatross pacing colt of 1979

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Unbeaten Niatross, the most-valuable harness-racing horse in history, is the two-year-old pacing colt of 1979.

Niatross was the unanimous choice in the U.S. Trotting Association's annual poll of 237 racing secretaries and harness racing writers.

Misty Misty was an overwhelming choice as two-year-old pacing filly champion, while Noble Hustle was named the top two-year-old trotting colt and Cranford the champion two-year-old trotting filly.

Niatross won all 13 of his starts and earned a record $604,000.

Lindsay wins prestigeous race

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Herb Lindsay of the United States won the 55th annual St. Silvester international foot race Tuesday, just after 1980 was born, with a time of 23 minutes, 26 seconds.

This time 754 athletes — including 186 competitors from 27 countries — entered the nine-kilometre (five miles) race, which begins each year just before midnight, New Year's Eve. Competitors consider it one of the most important distance events in the world.

Dana Slater of the U.S. won the women's division for the second year in a row.

Waples honored

TORONTO (CP) — Ron Waples, North America's top harness driver in 1979 with 440 victories, was the centre of attraction Tuesday at Ron Waples Day celebrations at Greenwood Raceway. But while the 35-year-old reinsman from Rockwood, Ont., came away with several honors associated with his accomplishments last year, he came up empty in the win column — unsuccesssful in nine drives New Year's Day.

Olympic boycott slapped by Killanin

LONDON (AP) — Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, today pleaded for politicians to stay out of international sports.

Killanin's plea, in a statement issued from IOC headquarters in Lausanne, Switzerland, came less than 24 hours after NATO partners meeting in Brussels discussed a possible boycott of this summer's Moscow Olympics, a suggestion reported to have been put forward by a West German representative.

The boycott proposal, discussed at an emergency session of the 15-nation North Atlantic Treaty Organization on Tuesday, was in response to the Soviet Union's invasion of Afghanistan which has angered and alarmed Western opinion.

Killanin said: "I have always felt that at times administrators, and even the IOC, forget that athletes come first, and in no way should be prevented from competing in international competition by political, racial or religious discrimination."

Killanin was supported by Sir Denis Follows, chairman of the British Olympic Association, who said: "We would resist as strongly as we could, any attempt by the (British) government to interfere with us participating in the Olympics. It is not for governments to meddle in matters of this kind."

The IOC is to send entry forms to national Olympic committees before the end of the month. It is the prerogative of these bodies only to accept or refuse invitations and then nominate competitors, in conjunction with individual sports federations.

It is not compulsory for IOC member nations to accept the invitation to enter the Games, but it is against Olympic rules to withdraw once a final entry has been made.

The IOC is almost certain to discuss the proposed boycott at its 82nd session at Lake Placid, N.Y. next month.

Two Norwegian sports administrators warned that the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan could lead to a widespread boycott.

"Strong forces are already working for a boycott of the 1980 Summer Games and the thought of such a boycott should not be remote," said Arne Mollen, chairman of the Norwegian Olympic Committee.

Jan Staubo, Norway's IOC member, said he is against all demonstrations directed against the Olympics.

"However, I strongly regret the military-political intervention into Afghanistan by the Soviet Union, because it may jeopardize the Summer Games," Staubo said.

A number of British politicians are openly campaigning for a boycott.

Neville Trotter, Conservative MP for Tynemouth, has written to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, urging her to take the initiative by appealing to all Commonwealth nations to withdraw from the Games.

Kiwi golfer wins

ZAURXNGA, New Zealand (Reuter) — New Zealander Bob Charles shot a three-under-par 67 today to win the New Zealand Professional Golfers Association championship by six strokes over Australian Roger Davis.

Charles finished with a 72-hole total of 261.

Bob Beauchemin of Victoria finished at 277.

Sadri makes final facing discipline

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — American John Sadri reached the final of the $362,000 Australian Open tennis tournament today, beating veteran Australian Colin Dibley in four sets.

Sadri will meet top-seeded Argentinian Guillermo Vilas.

Sadri took 45 minutes to wrap up the match that was postponed from Tuesday after three sets because of darkness, winning 6-4, 7-6, 6-7, 6-4.

Sadri will play the final although he is faced with a fine because of his on-court performance during the semi-final match.

Sadri's game Tuesday was studded with obscene gestures and language and at one stage he smashed his racket on the court.

After the match, Dibley described Sadri's performance as "garbage" and said he had never played against a worse sport.

Dibley could offer only token resistance in today's postponed fourth set because he had to play with his stomach in a brace after pulling a muscle Tuesday.

"I found it very difficult to stretch up for the ball," Dibley said.

Dibley said he refused a pain killer because he didn't want to do any more damage to his stomach.

"He had too many open hits on me so that made it tough," the 35-year-old veteran said.

Heavy frost hits soccer

LONDON (Reuter) — The weather was the big winner in British soccer Tuesday as heavy frost cut deeply into the English and Scottish programs for the first time this season.

A total of 28 matches were postponed, including four in the English First Division and the two big teams, Liverpool and Manchester United, were both given the day off.

The main recipients of the reduced program was London club Arsenal, which won 1-0 away over Southampton to move above its opponents and back into third place in the division.

Arsenal used a first-half goal from defender Willie Young to climb to within four points of second place, though it has played one more game than United and two more than Liverpool which had its match postponed.

Norwich moved into a fourth place tie with Southampton by drawing 0-0 against Crystal Palace in London. But Norwich might have had a better result because Palace had dropped its previous three games.

Ipswich continued to move up the table with a 4-0 thumping of West Bromwich Albion, and now is part of a four-way tie for sixth. Paul Mariner, John Wark, Russell Osman and Franz Thisjssen were the scorers.

European champions Nottingham Forest slipped back into its losing ways by going down 1-0 at Everton with Brian Kidd scoring the goal after 24 minutes. Brighton continued good form with a 2-2 away draw against Bristol City.

Newcastle pulled clear at the top of the Second Division with a 3-1 triumph over Sunderland. Luton and Chelsea drew 3-3 in a morning match.

Bum Phillips, a master of defense

Cauthen captures series

PERTH, Australia (AP) — Steve Cauthen of the United States won an international jockeys' challenge series Tuesday although his final two mounts finished out of the money.

Cauthen collected 12 points in the four-race series held over the Christmas-New Year period and edged Australian Malcolm Johnston by one point.

Cauthen's prize was 50 gold sovereigns, valued at $7,240.

Earlier, British jockey Willie Carson rode Rothschild to victory in the $135,000 Perth Cup.

When you play for Bum, you bust your belt buckle

By WILL GRIMSLEY

SAN DIEGO (AP) — He is an owlish man in his 50s, with crewcut hair and jowly cheeks. He can't see the 50-yard line with thick-lens spectacles. His jaw is usually crammed with chewing tobacco. He wears brightly colored cowboy boots and a wide-brimmed Texas hat with an ostrich feather around the brim.

But no country bumpkin is O.A. (Bum) Phillips, head coach of Houston Oilers football team. He's got a football mind like a steel trap.

Phillips, rancher, horse trader, defensive genius, has emerged as the most captivating personality in the National Football League playoffs, counting down to the Jan. 20 Super Bowl.

If the victories of Tampa Bay and Los Angeles were surprises, Houston's 17-14 upset of the highly-touted San Diego Chargers was nothing short of a miracle.

The Oilers entered the game with their veteran quarterback, Dan Pastorini, and star ball-carrier, Earl Campbell, rendered hors de combat. Ken Burrough was aching so much he could only be used as a decoy.

"If we run out of players, we will just punt and play defence," lamented Phillips before the game, noting that the game was so much in the bag for the Chargers that Las Vegas refused to establish a line on it.

The Oilers didn't run out of players. Instead, it must have looked to Dan Fouts, San Diego's 4,082-yard passing genius, as if Oilers were coming out of the ground by the dozens — especially Vernon Perry, the rookie from the Canadian Football League who intercepted four of Fouts' passes, blocked a field goal attempt and ran the ball back 57 yards.

It was a day that the sheer grit and guts of the battered defensive unit spoiled the dreams of a team that many expected to go all the way.

And behind it all was the deft hand of the rugged yet fatherly figure they call Bum, whose trademark in close to 30 years of coaching has been defence.

Phillips was asked afterward how many pairs of boots he kept in his closet.

"Lots," he replied.

"Are they all blue?" someone queried, calling attention to his azure, high-heeled, pointed-toe footwear.

"Naw, I got all colors," he replied, suggesting — perhaps justifiably — that he saw no reason to that line of questioning.

"Don't forget, you've become a TV personality," someone said.

"Don't know why," he said, still attempting to shift attention from himself.

Referring to his familiar 10-gallon hat, Phillips said, "When you're on the eastern side of the field, you need something to keep the sun out of your eyes."

As for tobacco, he says: "Been chewin' all my life."

Bum's earthiness has dripped down to his players, who apparently would jump off the Golden Gate bridge for him. "I know of no one who is better at motivating his players," says Alabama's Paul (Bear) Bryant, a long-time admirer.

Phillips is a fresh relief from the many steely-eyed gridiron tacticians who stroll up and down the sidelines on Saturday and Sunday afternoons in season.

The probing TV cameras lay them bare for the world to see. A player makes a costly error. He is yanked. He is either chewed out before millions or, worse still, given the "deep freeze" treatment, completely ignored.

It is a heritage of the late Vince Lombardi's "winning is everything" syndrome.

It's not Phillips' way. Chewing and spitting, he takes everything - bad and good - in stride. Showing fatherly concern, he drapes an arm around the offender's shoulder and whispers encouragement in his ear: "Don't worry, kid, you'll make it up next time."

The player does, too. When you play for a guy like Bum Phillips, you bust your belt buckles. And it shows.

Dave Shields on national junior squad

Skate teams selected

SASKATOON — Dave Shields of the Esquimalt Speedskating Club has been selected to the national junior "B" team as a result of outdoor national trials that ended here Monday.

Shields finished second to Cam Tipping of Edmonton in the 10,000 metres Monday.

Tipping won the event in 16:35.2 minutes, setting the last record in a record-smashing meet.

A Canadian record was established in all nine scheduled events as skaters vied to earn positions the national team for next month's winter Olympic Games at Lake Placid, N.Y. Selections to the Olympic team will be made only from the national team.

"In past years one or two records might have been broken, but never all of them," said Jack Walters, coach of the Canadian national team.

"They (the trials) were the best in every conceivable aspect."

Winnipeg's Sylvia Burka totally dominated the women's competition, rewriting the records book in all four of women's events.

The former world champion set Canadian records in the 500, 1,000, 1,500 and 3,000 metre events, capturing first spot in both the women's senior sprint and all-round categories.

In the men's events, Gaetan Boucher of Ste. Foy, Que., set Canadian records in the 500, 1,000 and 1,500 metres and earned first place in the senior sprint category.

The former indoor world champion tied Regina's Craig Webster in the 500 metre event, sharing the record with him.

Webster, who placed second in the senior sprint category and first in the all-round, also established a Canadian record in the 5,000 metres.

Knicks trying to get Lucas?

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — New York Knicks will neither confirm nor deny reports that they have made four recent offers to obtain Maurice Lucas from Portland Trail Blazers of the National Basketball Association.

The Oregonian newspaper said the offers were all made within the last two weeks.

The Blazers said player personnel has been discussed with the Knicks recently, but denied any specific offers.

Stu Inman, director of player personnel for the Blazers, said the talks with the Knicks "doesn't mean anything is imminent."

But the general manager of the Knicks said last week that his club is "always interested in a player of Lucas' proven ability.

"But we don't want to disrupt our rebuilding process," said Eddie Donovan. "He's (Lucas) only 27, so he could help us for some years to come. But it all depends on how much we would have to give up."

The newspaper quoted sources in both organizations as confirming that the Blazers rejected scenarios that would have swapped Lucas for:

— Knick starters Ray Williams, a guard, and Toby Knight, a forward;

— Williams and starting forward Joe Meriweather;

— Meriweather and the rights to Reggie Carter, a guard at St. John's University, who was the Knicks' second-round choice as a future in the last college draft;

— Knight and a first-round draft choice.

Inman said he inquired about the availability of Knight, a 6-foot-9 forward from Notre Dame. "But those other names were never mentioned," Inman insisted. "They have never been mentioned in any conversation between us and the Knicks. Not this year. Not any year."

The Knicks are in the market to find a strong forward to complement rookie centre Bill Cartwright.

Tourney action for UVic clubs

Classical guitarist Liona Boyd, who appears with the Victoria Symphony Feb. 17 and 18, has never been to a hairdresser — life on the road doesn't allow the Canadian musician much time for a regular beauty routine. Instead, she trims her long fair hair herself. "At this time in my life, my guitar really takes priority," said Boyd in a recent telephone interview from Montreal, where she was promoting her recently-released album, Liona Boyd, Andrew Davis, The English Chamber Orchestra.

Boyd

The commissary manager of a New York mental hospital was fired because his stock included bows and arrows used for hunting, heavy-duty slingshots, fishhooks and pipe-cleaning knives. Nick Vecchio, commissary manager at Pilgrim State Psychiatric Centre in Brentwood, was fired for selling what hospital officials called "inappropriate materials." Vecchio said the items were stocked for sale exclusively to hospital workers and he instructed commissary employees not to sell the items to patients. Deputy director John Magoolaghan, who ordered the discharge of Vecchio, said "just the idea of having sling shots and other weapons in a mental institution is unbelievable."

When the editors of Penthouse sent their humor editor to Peking, they expected him to come home at least with a few zingy one-liners. But Bill Lee came home last week — and he wasn't laughing. Says he, "China is an Orwellian society today. It's gone crass commercial. It's 1984 marked down from 2500 B.C." And that isn't all. Lee complains he was steered to a "Great Wall Gift Shop — with prices in English." Wails New Yorker Lee, "I couldn't get a pizza, a hot dog or hamburger for two weeks. I couldn't wait to get home to my newborn daughter and hear her cry all night."

A 35-year-old Whistler resident has won $1 million in the Provincial lottery. Robert Duncan Maxwell, a truckdriver, won in the Oct. 28 draw, but only claimed his prize recently after he found the ticket while going through his pockets, said B.C. Lotteries branch spokesman Bob Delaney. Maxwell and his wife Eileen have two children and they plan to buy a house, take a holiday trip and invest the rest of the money.

Dear Abby:

A year ago, our 19-year-old daughter (I'll call her Ellen) went to work in a large office. Six months later, a woman phoned, saying Ellen and her husband (I'll call him Don) were having an affair!

Don is Ellen's boss. He is 36 and has 3 children. My husband and I were stunned.

We confronted Ellen with this. She admitted that she and Don had been seeing each other, but that he didn't love his wife, so she didn't feel responsible for breaking up his marriage.

Don moved out of his house and into an apartment. Ellen, who had been living at home, rented an apartment near his. We found out that they are living together, and Ellen only keeps her apartment for appearances sake. Don's wife told us that although her husband has had other affairs, she still loves him but has no alternative, so she's filing for divorce.

She comes home occasionally, and I know she loves us. I want to tell her to stay away, but a counsellor advises us not to shut her out — that it would only drive her closer to this man. I think if we tell her we don't want to see her while she's involved with Don, she might realize that she needs her family, and that this man is just using her.

We love her very much but are torn about what to do.

Heartsick

Dear Heartsick:

Your counsellor is right. If you shut your daughter out, you'll drive her closer to Don. All parents want desperately to protect their children, but some grown children must make their own mistakes.

Dear Abby:

The letter signed Chicken struck a painfully responsive chord. Chicken was engaged to be married, the invitations had been sent and the gifts were pouring in. All the while she had a feeling that the marriage wouldn't work, but lacked the nerve to call it off.

A year and a half ago, I was engaged to a man who appeared to be "perfect" for me. Both sets of parents were overjoyed. On the surface it looked like an ideal match, but in my heart I knew there were unresolved problems, (He knew it, too.)

The closer we got to the wedding date, the more certain I was that it wouldn't work, but all the plans were made, the invitations went out, and lavish gifts started coming in. Three hundred and forty guests were coming to the wedding, and my dear mother had worked so hard to pull it all together that I didn't have the heart to call it off.

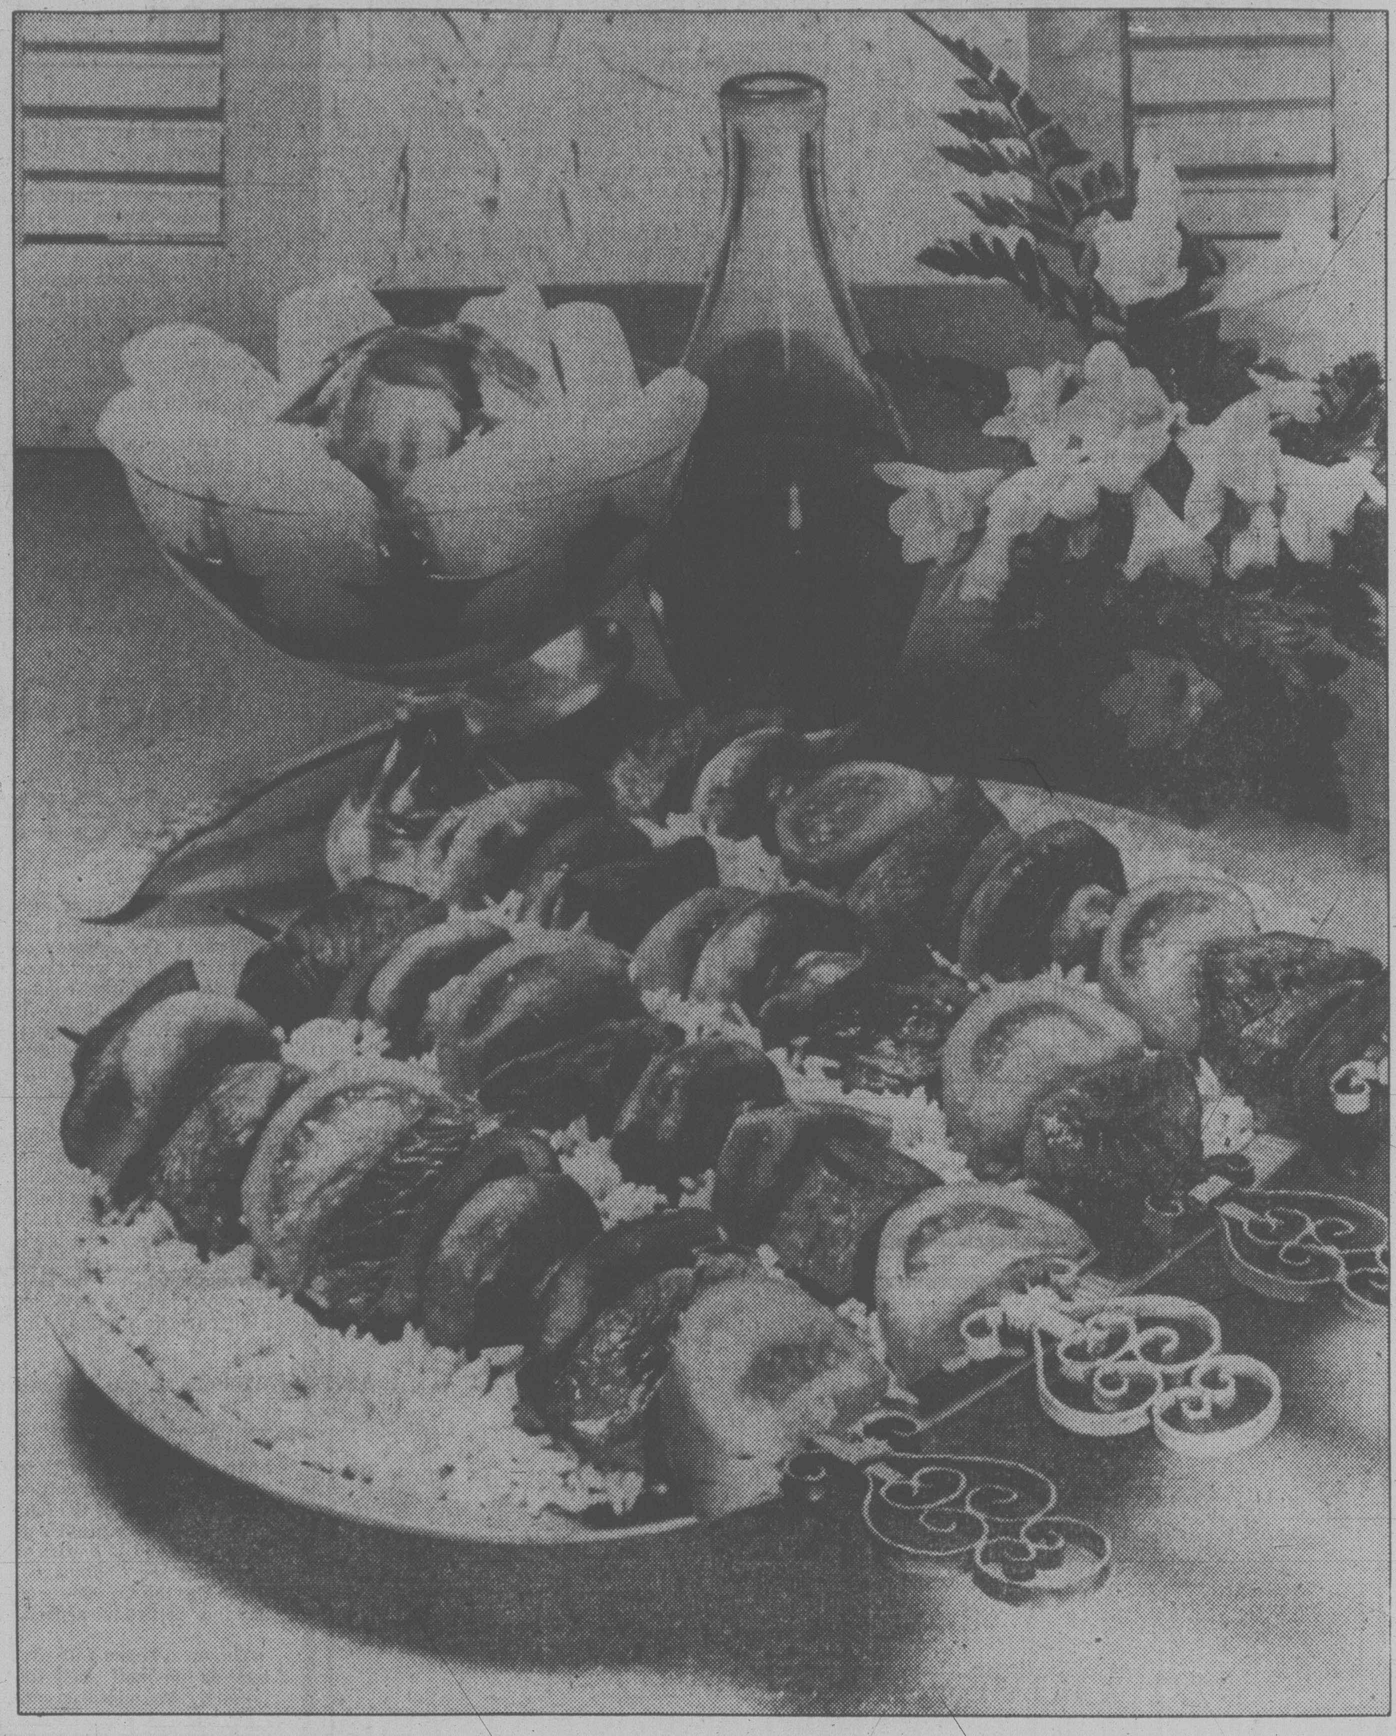
The marriage lasted four months, and we are still litigating the divorce. The pain and embarrassment for my parents — and his — has been incredible. Those who sent wedding gifts felt ripped off, and everyone wonders what went wrong.

Abby, your advi[illegible]cken [illegible] right on! "Cancel the wedding by telephone or telegram immediately! It will be somewhat sticky, but far better than being stuck in a bad marriage.

Out of the Frying Pan

January barbecue nice PR

By MIKE McGRADY



Call it shish kabob, souvlaki, lamb cubes or brochettes — they're delicious

Nearly three-quarters of a century ago, Richard Blechynden, an Englishman, decided to show North Americans the proper way to brew a cup of tea. He set up his tea booth at the St. Louis World's Fair in 1904 and waited for the customers. Unfortunately, the St. Louis temperature got up near 100 degrees and stayed there. Blechynden's tea was brisk but his business was not.

One day while killing time, which Blechynden was doing a lot of that summer, to took to pitching chunks of ice into his kettle of perfectly brewed tea. Absent-mindedly, he took a sip. Then a second. Hmmm. Maybe just a little more lemon and sugar. The rest, as they say, is history.

Though it may be January, the other odd thing about the iced tea you're going to make tonight, it's even easier. And firing up the barbecue mid-winter will also give you a pleasant twist — and make the West Coast even more the envy of those in the frozen East. Stay tuned.

The Staples: Make sure these are all on hand: garlic, sugar, olive oil, white wine vinegar, salt, pepper, thyme, red wine, lemons, Worcestshire sauce, Dijon mustard. Also, a half-dozen skewers for barbecuing.

The Shopping List: Two pounds fresh spinach; one-half pound bacon; a leg of lamb, boned (approximately seven pounds before boning); seven large onions; six green peppers; one pound large mushrooms; one pound cherry tomatoes; one small tin of tea leaves (not tea bags); pears to go on chocolate ripple ice cream.

Prepare the Day Before: The marinade for the lamb. Mix one cup of red wine with a half-cup of olive oil and a quarter-cup of lemon juice. Add one onion, chopped fine. And three minced garlic cloves, a large pinch of thyme and a generous amount of salt and pepper.

Cut the lamb into two-inch cubes and soak the cubes in the marinade overnight. Several times during the course of the next 24 hours, turn the meat pieces over.

Also to be Prepared the Day Before: The iced tea. The very notion of instant iced tea is a comment on our times. What could be more instant that plain, old-fashioned, regular tea — just add boilng water, right? Still, this isn't enough for an Instant Culture so all-encompassing as our own. We had to find a way to make instant tea even more instant — never mind that it requires the addition of "flavor enhancers," preservatives, additives and other ingredients better suited to a laboratory.

One perfectly acceptable way to make iced tea, of course, is to brew a cup of regular hot tea and add ice — the original Richard Blechynden formula. However, since this is clearly too much work for most of us, here's a simpler method. The only catch: it must be made a day before you drink it.

Begin with a quart of cold water. Add five heaping teaspoons of tea leaves. Put this in the refrigerator and wait. That's all there is to it. No cooking. No muss, no fuss, no bother.

And now, on to the feast.

5 p.m.: Begin the barbecue fire.

Cut the green peppers into square pieces and the onions into wedges. Cut the caps away from the mushroom stems. Thread the food on the skewers — alternating the meat chunks with the peppers, the onions, the whole mushrooms and an occasional cherry tomato, or larger tomato slices, thrown in for color. Set aside until later.

5:30 p.m. For your salad you'll want spinach that is young and tender. The spinach must be carefully rinsed in a bowl of cool water, then dried with paper towels. Break the spinach leaves into small pieces. Mince one of the onions and add it to the spinach. Slice several of the raw mushrooms and add them. In future spinach salads, you may want to try adding crumbled hard-boiled egg of croutons.

Cut the bacon into small pieces and fry over medium heat until cooked through. Add a tablespoon of Dijon mustard and a dash of Worcestershire sauce and a quarter of a cup of white vinegar. Mix well and set aside until ready to serve.

6 p.m.: Barbecue the skewers over the hot charcoals, turning them frequently and basting occasionally with the marinade. The trick is to have everything barbecued perfectly at the same time — the lamb should be browned on the outside, pink and succulent on the inside; the vegetables should be cooked but not burned. Lots of luck.

When the shish kebab is done, set the skewers to the side of the barbecue and dash back into the kitchen. Heat the bacon and vinegar over high heat until the mix starts to bubble; stir it and pour it directly over the spinach. Serve it immediately along with the shish kebab.

And finally, the tea. Take your pitcher of tea from the refrigerator. Add some lemon and sugar and serve over ice cubes. You may have some trouble convincing the young members of the family that this really is iced tea. But when you see te expressions on their faces, you'll have some inkling of what Richard Blechynden felt 74 years ago that day when he knew the enterprise was saved.

Seattle team brings vaccine hope

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

Two different kinds of vaccine are being actively studied for immunity from gonorrhea. When the vaccine was originally contemplated, the specialists at the National Institutes of Health were not enthusiastic about it. Today, there seems to be greater hope for its efficiency.

Dr. Thomas M. Buchanan, professor of medicine at the University of Medicine in Seattle, and his co-work[illegible]re beginni[illegible]translate their laboratory findings into human protection. The Seattle team, using a modification of the original gonorrheal vaccine, believe that they now can immunize people and, especially, prevent pelvic inflamation in women.

The use of ultrasound in medicine seems to have no limits. A group of pediatricians at Yale University, under the direction of Dr. Charles S. Kleinman, have used ultrasound to detect heart defects in a fetus at the age of only 22 weeks.

By this method, known as "echocardiography," some defects of the heart may be picked up so that surgeons alerted to a problem can save the life of the newborn infant.

Those who are working with this technique believe that the method has enormous potential and represents a major advance in the study of the unborn child and in the preservation of life.

The possibility that atherosclerosis can be halted, or even reversed, has intrigued scientists for years. Dr. David T. Nash, of the State University of New York in Syracuse, believes that he now has definite proof that this is possible.

He said, "This feat was achieved by slashing cholesterol levels with lipid-lowering drugs." He contends that his two-year study with 17 patients should dispel doubting Thomases from thinking that this is impossible.

At the start of his studies, all 17 patients showed X-ray evidence of narrowing of the coronary arteries. These patients also had marked elevation of cholesterol levels in their blood. After a long period of treatment with the drug, "colestipol," combined with low-cholesterol diet and exercise, there seemed to be definite evidence of some reversal of atherosclerosis.

Dr. Nash and his co-workers certainly believe that this original study needs substantia[illegible] group of cases before it can be unequivocally accepted as the answer to this major problem.

Doctors at other hospitals around the country are anxious to duplicate these findings.

Holiday taste treats can be made all year

kay spicer

Appetizers or whatever you call them — canapes, hors d'oeuvres, tidbits — are perfect "little meals." You probably sampled some over Christmas and New Year's Eve. You can prepare them for nibbles at an afternoon get-together anytime this coming year. Serve them as tasty bites to alert and sharpen appetites for that special main course. Feature them as specialties to please palates at a late evening snack.

For quick, slick appetizer preparation keep some of the following on hand: tiny sweet and sour pickles; Vienna sausage, cheese with crackers, olives, prepared spreads, canned tuna or salmon, canned tiny shrimp. For garnishes use bits of the following: chopped anchovies, capers, celery leaves, chopped chives, sliced cucumbers, green onions, hard-cooked eggs, lemon slices, picked onions, watercress, parsley, red or green peppers.

Egg appetizers are always popular. Simply cut hard-cooked eggs in half then fill the hollow whites with a creamed filling of yolk, mayonnaise or butter and seasoning. Or be more elaborate and extravagant; use shrimp, smoked oysters or caviar in the filling.

If you keep a few hard-cooked eggs in the refrigerator you can always surprise unexpected drop-in guests with mouth-watering Devilled Eggs. With grated Parmesan cheese on hand you can make party-maker Parmesan Puffs. Smoky Salmon Spread turns a can of salmon into a specialty.

DEVILLED EGGS

6 hard-cooked eggs, preferably large size
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons mayonnaise
½ teaspoon prepared hot mustard
Dash of Tabasco
Pinch of salt

Peel eggs; cut in half lengthwise. Remove yolks; mash with fork. Stir in butter, mayonnaise, mustard, Tabasco and salt.

Mix thoroughly. Fill egg white halves with yolk mixture. Pipe filling into cavities of egg whites if you wish. Cover lightly with plastic wrap. Refrigerate until serving time. Filling will firm up as it chills, because of the butter in the filling. Also the butter improves the storage quality. Garnish tops with tiny strip of smoked salmon; olive slice, smoked oyster, parsley, pimiento strip.

CHEESE STUFFED EGGS
Makes 12

Basic yolk mixture from 6 yolks
12 cooked egg white halves
6 tablespoons crumbled blue cheese or grated old cheddar cheese
½ cup softened cream cheese
Finely chopped parsley

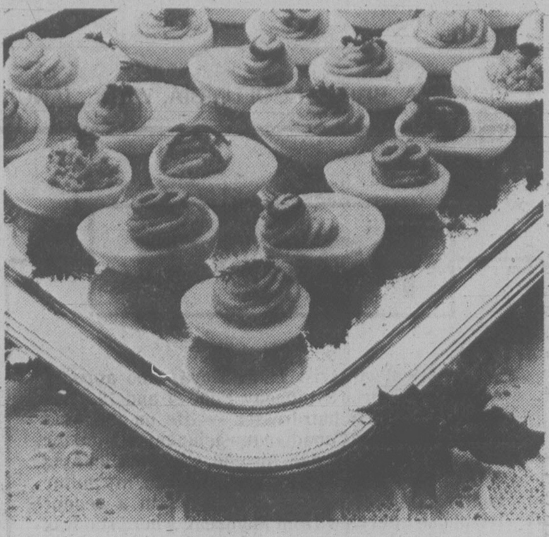
Add blue or cheddar cheese to basic egg yolk mixture; mix well. Stir a bit of chopped parsley into mixture. Fill egg white halves and garnish with more parsley.

PARMESAN PUFFS
Makes 50 appetizers

1 cup water
½ cup oil
1 cup all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon garlic salt
4 eggs
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
Oil for deep frying

Pour water and oil in a medium saucepan. Bring to a rapid boil; add flour and salts all at once. Stir rapidly until mixture forms a cooked dough and leave the sides of the pan. Remove from heat; cool 2 to 3 minutes. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition, until mixture is smooth. Stir in grated Parmesan and Worcestershire sauce. Heat oil to 375° F in deep fryer or electric frying pan (oil should be about 2 inches deep). Drop batter by the teaspoonful into hot oil. Cook, turning once, until golden brown. Drain on absorbent paper. Serve immediately.

Puffs can be made ahead then kept in the freezer for up to 6 weeks. Cool puffs; pack well in airtight freezer bags or wrap with foil or plastic wrap. Label and freeze.



Devilled eggs

SMOKED SALMON PATE
Makes 3 cups, enough for about 40 appetizers

1 can (1 pound) sockeye salmon
1 package (8-ounce) cream cheese
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 teaspoon finely chopped onion
¼ teaspoon liquid smoke
¼ teaspoon salt
Finely chopped parsley

Drain salmon; flake. Cream cheese; stir in salmon, lemon juice, chopped onion, liquid smoke and salt; mix until thoroughly blended. Shape mixture into a ball or log. Chill until slightly hard. Roll in chopped parsley to coat completely. Chill thoroughly. Serve on a tray with crackers. Use a small knife fr spreading mixture onto crackers.

Note: Liquid smoke is usually available in specialty food stores. If unavailable or a bother to find substitute ½ teaspoon curry powder for liquid smoke in recipe for Curried Salmon Pate.

Memorable hotel meal a century old this week

craig claiborne

One hundred years ago on Dec. 31, 1879, Gilbert and Sullivan's The Pirates of Penzance had its world premiere in New York. To celebrate the occasion, there will be a Hundredth Anniversary exhibition of memorabilia at the Pierpont Morgan Library, opening tomorrow.

Part of that memorabilia will include the menu for a dinner given by Arthur Sullivan at the now-defunct Hotel Brunswick to mark his farewell to the city. It is a fascinating document, not only as an example of how the gentry dined in those days but also for the cost of the meal.

The dinner was attended by 18 guests in addition to Sullivan. It included four bottles of Chablis, three bottles of Amontillado "fruity" Sherry, four bottles of Pauillac (one of the four great wine communes of Bordeaux) and 10 bottles of Pommery sec Champagne, six bottles the first go-round and four bottles the second.

The meal began with oysters on the half shell followed by two soups, consomme and cream of asparagus.

There were assorted hors d'oeuvres followed by chicken boudins (white sausages) with a truffle sauce.

The "releves" or second course consisted of steamed bass with hollandaise sauce and a cucumber salad as well as a fillet of beef garnished "a la financiere," which is to say with tiny chicken quenelles, mushrooms, cockscombs and kidneys, diced truffles and small pitted olives and a truffle-scented Madeira wine sauce.

The "entrees" included roast chicken with a salad composed of artichokes, celery root, cold macaroni and a tomato-flavored mayonnaise plus "supremes de red head" with a Port wine sauce. That, a good deal of research proved, is breast of wild duck, probably grilled.

A sherbet served as something to clean the palate between meals.

The dinner continued with the roast course. This consisted of roast lamb and roast squab with a garnish of watercress, as well as a lettuce salad. There were four entremets: duchesse potatoes, petits pois francaises, stuffed tomatoes and buttered asparagus spears.

The "sucres" or sweets included an apricot Bavarian cream, a molded orange gelatin, pineapple "a la Richelieu" and "la poule aux oeufs d'or." Precisely what the chicken with the golden egg was is beyond my explanation. There were also petits fours, assorted fruit and "mottoes," whatever they were.

The cost of the meal, including flowers ($50), eight cigars ($2) and menus ($10), was $313.50. The bottles of Chablis cost $2.50 per bottle; the Bordeaux, $1 a bottle, and the Champagne, $3.50.

The estimated cost in a restaurant today of a single bottle of a good Pauillac of recent vintage would probably be in the vicinity of $18; a single bottle of Pommery sec, $25.

Someone volunteered the thought that the cost of a similar meal today "would have been so spectacular that the host might still be washing dishes in the Brunswick basement."

The meal, incidentally, took place on the evening of March 2, 1880.

Speaking of wines, we recently attended a testimonial dinner at Windows on the World for Sam Aaron, one of the owners of Sherry Lehmann, the wine and spirit merchants. Someone had brought to the occasion a catalogue from the shop dated 1940.

In those days you could have purchased a bottle of Pouilly Fuisse, 1934 harvest, for $1.19; a bottle of Chateau d'Yquem, 1928, for $2.49, and a bottle of Perrier Jouet Champagne, 1926, for $4.60.

Aspirin can help relieve the suffering of people who have arthritis. In fact, this drug was originally developed specifically for people with rheumatoid arthritis. While aspirin does ease the pain of arthritis, its more important function is its ability to reduce inflammation — the condition that damages joints.

There is no definite daily aspirin dose for people who have arthritis. Furthermore, though aspirin is safe for most people, a small segment of the population cannot tolerate it. For this reason, each person should consult his physician before he makes any move.

The Truth About Aspirin And Arthritis is a free folder that will provide you with additional information on this subject. Ask for a copy of this folder from: The Arthritis Society, 920 Yonge Street, Suite 420, Toronto, Ontario M4W 3J7.

Kitchen storage affects eating habits

There is no question that preparing meals at home eases the strain on the food budget, but also there is the physical advantage gained by being able to control the use of sweetners (including sugar) and of table salt, to name just two items lavishly used as preservatives in commercially prepared food.

As a beginning for new homemakers and for those wishing to know more about home prepared meals, a few hints on storing some of the staple foods should be useful. With the well designed kitchen cupboards of today and prominence given to refrigerator storage space, it is surprising to find a number of staples stored casually in unsuitable places.

For instance, flour containing some of the whole wheat although ground to a fine texture, should be stored with the bag tightly closed in a dry cool place; the bottom shelf of a cupboard at floor level. This is to retard spoiling of oil in the wheat germ and the wheat bran, particles of which are present in wholewheat flour. A white flour usually has had these desirable parts of the grain removed to prevent possibility of spoilage.

Wheat germ and wheat bran are both sold separately in small 454g bags so we can add them freely to all foods using wheat and some other grains including all baked goods generally. Both products need dry cool storage — with bag tops rolled down to exclude air or with all air squeezed out and the bag closed with a quick plastic tie. Keep these items in the refrigerator door shelves.

Air, heat and moisture are enemies of whole grain products.

The 3-lb. (1.36 kg) bags of oat flakes, rye flakes, barley and wheat flakes all need keeping in a cool bottom cupboard, each with air squeezed from the package before closing with a tie.

There is a reason why most of the above mentioned food items are sold in relatively small packages for home use.

It is a safeguard for us homemakers against having these good foods become rancid with too long storage in less than ideal conditions.

I have seen some of these items in a high cupboard over a stove. Even without the heat from the stove, we all know that hot air rises, making the ceiling much warmer than the floor. I have seen a 20-lb. bag of flour in a lower cupboard with the top wide open for convenience in scooping out a cupful as needed. And I wonder whether that homemaker was getting full value in the meals produced.

Each of us should buy in quantities according to use and to available suitable storage space. There will be less waste from off-flavors. A "want list" is always in sight on the counter to prevent being short of an item, for it must be added to the list before needed.

Skim milk powder is as perishable as grain products. This great money saver should be bought in sizes according to frequency of use. If milk powder is used only for making milk for beverages a small bag may last a week. If added dry to daily casseroles, desserts, cakes, cookies and soups as a protein boost, a 1.5kg will be used in about two weeks so that a 2.5kg bag will be more economical especially when using skim milk powder in the making of yogurt every five days and for granola making.

If not stored cool and dry, the powder develops an off-flavor the same as a carton of milk after its "pull date", so keep the bag tightly closed, in a bottom cool cupboard.

Brown rice, used for its pleasant flavor, has shorter storage time than white because it contains some of the rice germ and part of the husk. Wild rice with its complete germ and husk will probably keep in good condition for still less time unless stored in cold dry storage which is desirable with all whole grains. The pioneer homes had plenty such space compared with our homes today expecially here on the Pacific Coast.

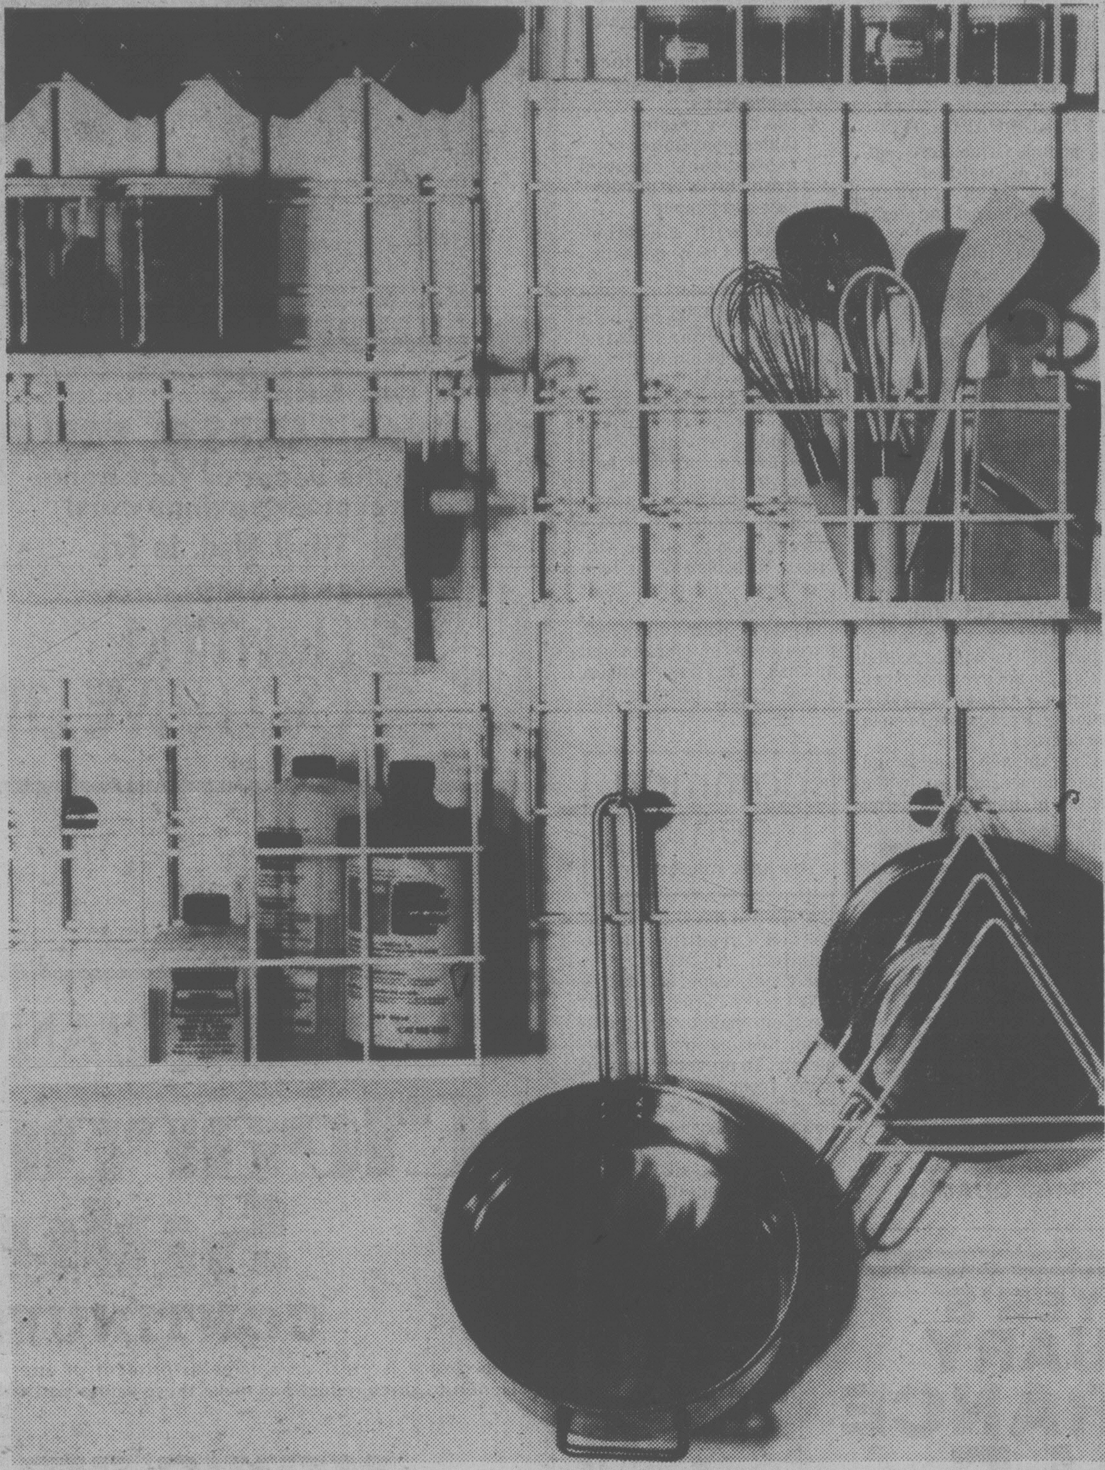
Rice polishings, soy flour, soy grits, all sold in small packages, are stored in their tightly closed bags in the refrigerator door, because they all contain the oil of their gran germ. Most of us are aware that oil becomes rancid with warmth and exposure to air. These are vegetable oils and must be treated with respect — they are perishable.

The bottled vegetable oils — sunflower, safflower, soy and the others — must, of course, be stored on refrigerator shelves. Buy the 682 ml bottle or even the still smaller size unless your use is constant and lavish.

After using these perishable ingredients for cooking, it is reasonable to be aware that they must be returned to their respective storage as soon as possible. It is just a part of the cooking procedure.

Other foods containing oils are nuts and seeds. These, when out of their shell as filberts and walnuts, or out of their husks as sunflower seeds and peanuts soon develop a rancid musty flavor if kept in a cupboard at head level. When bought shelled and salted they have a much longer life since salt is a preservative.

However, salt alters the nut flavors and reduces the nutrition value by adding excess salt to the diet.



Having what you want, stored where you can see it, assures it being used

Keep packets of fresh shelled nuts and seeds closed tightly to keep out air and moisture, in rack of refrigerator door, and use within a month or so at longest from date from date of purchase. Write your own date on packages for reference if you like.

Nuts in shells keep well in a dry cold but not freezing place for a year at least if all are pefect when first stored.

Yeast of various kinds need cold storage without freezing. Vacuum packaged baking yeast in foil has a "good before" date on each packet I believe. Baking yeast granules in bulk, last a year in door rack, with same good bread and bun results as on first day.

My last price on bulk baking yeast was 95 cents for 8 ounces. It is probably more now, but still will be a good buy with the advantage of never being without fresh yeast when the urge or need for making bread or buns arise.

Brewer's yeast and torula yeast I feel should be used in less than a month from purchase for it is a finely ground and fresh viable yeast needing to have air excluded from the package at each using, and a cold storage place in the refrigerator door rack. Carelessly stored or left around in warmth, it would doubtless develop an off-flavor.

These items on storage for perishable staple foods may surprise some readers but you will note they are not the staples with a guaranteed shelf life.

With commonsense care and awareness of storage needs, they contribute to good meals prepared at home.

And now that we know just where all the ingredients are kept, let us make a dozen Wheat Muffins that go so well with snacks for New Year well-wishers. Choose medium size muffin pans, or even the smallest size if appetites are likely to be jaded. Adjust baking time by five minutes or more for the smallest. You will find these are nice and plain yet pleasant eating with little squares of cheese.

WHEAT MUFFINS

150ml wheat bran
150ml wheat germ
250ml buttermilk (from powder if desired)
5ml baking soda
75ml softened margarine
30ml sugar
1 small egg
1ml powdered ginger (or less)
250ml unbleached flour
5ml baking powder
2ml salt

Measure wheat bran and wheat germ into bowl with buttermilk and baking soda for 5 minutes.

Add creamed margarine with sugar; drop in egg and beat well.

Now add remaining dry ingredients, mixed, and stir only to blend. Mixture should be lumpy for best results.

Spoon into well greased muffin pans of chosen size. Bake in moderate oven 190 deg.C for 25 minutes for medium size. Check at 15 and 20 minutes for smaller, to prevent scorching. Oven heats vary.

When baked, remove from pans to cool on wire rack. Muffins can be served warmed or cold, for breakfast with fruit or in lunch boxes with cheese and dried fruit. Store in refrigerator, covered.

Home prepared food seems more versatile than most of the commercial, perhaps because the ingredients are known to us and are less complicated. Enlist the aid of family members in a continuing program of preparing meals at home.

Meet chef LeRoy

By STEVEN RAICHLEN
Christian Science Monitor

Louis LeRoy doesn't look like a great chef. He lacks a chef's rotund belly, for example, and he prefers to cook in his street clothes rather than chief's whites, without the starched white toque — the tall chef's hat he is more than entitled to wear.

Mostly, LeRoy just doesn't look old enough to have twice garnered coveted stars in the Michelin Guide Book before opening, at age 24, a starred and much-praised restaurant of his own. He also was voted best chef in Brittany in 1977.

LeRoy's restaurant is the Auberge de la Porte de France, a magnificent 17th-century inn in Lannion, on the North Coast of Brittany.

His recipes are a boon to the cook short on preparation time at home:

FISH EN PAPILLOTE

- 1½ pounds striped bass, salmon, or swordfish
- 4 cups fresh spinach, washed, dried and stems removed
- 2 carrots, julienned (cut into thin matchsticks)
- 1 turnip or large parsnip, julienned
- 2 leeks, white part only, julienned
- 2 tablespoons chopped fresh herbs, like dill, chives or basil
- 4 tablespoons butter
- One-half cup clam broth
- Salt, pepper
- 4 12-by-24-inch rectangles of aluminum foil.

Cut fish into broad, quarter-inch-thick escalopes and season liberally with salt and pepper. Cook vegetables separately in boiling salted water. Do not overcook; they should remain a little crunchy. Preheat the oven to 400 degrees F.

Chop spinach coarsely and make hand-size piles in the center of half of each foil rectangle. Place fish on spinach and top with vegetables, herbs, seasonings and a pat of butter. Fold the other half of the foil over the fish and seal the sides by rolling and pinching the edges to make a square envelope. Pour 2 tablespoons clam broth in each envelope and seal the remaining edge. The resulting foil bag should be at least 2 inches larger on all sides than the fish.

Bake the papillotes for 10 to 12 minutes, or until the foil-bags are puffed with steam. Serve at once, providing each guest with a sharp knife for opening his own papillote at the table.

STEAMED CHICKEN WITH PUREED LEEKS

- 1 frying chicken, cut into 8 pieces
- 4 cups chicken stock, apple cider or water
- 1 pound leeks
- ½ cup heavy cream
- 3 tablespoons butter
- 3 tablespoons chopped fresh chives or parsley
- Salt and pepper

A wok with a bamboo steamer or a large pot with a strainer is needed for steaming. Discard green tops and wash and cut leeks into half-inch rounds. Bring stock to a boil in the bottom of steamer. Season chicken, place over boiling liquid and cover tightly. Steam chicken 35 to 40 minutes, or until cooked.

Meanwhile, prepare leek puree by boiling leeks in lightly salted water for 20 minutes or until soft. Drain thoroughly and puree with cream in a blender or food processor. Add butter, salt and pepper to taste.

To serve, pour a little leek puree over the chicken and garnish with fresh chives. Serve remaining puree in a side dish.

After two days, the foam-backed carpeting in the bathroom still wasn't dry. The young couple was told to take up the carpeting to let the foam backing and bathroom flooring dry out completely. To prevent lingering odors from the toilet overflow, the couple took the carpeting to a drycleaner with electronic deodorizing equipment. (It all cost less than replacing the carpeting.)

Curious spaghetti squash a tasty invention

the 60-minute gourmet

When I came to North America I realized that there were numerous vegetables that were totally new to me, among them bean sprouts, arugula, broccoli rape and bitter melon. The astonishing thing, however, is that the seed companies are "inventing" vegetables unknown 20 years ago. One of the most intriguing of these is the one referred to as spaghetti squash — grown in the Victoria area for years.

It is an interesting novelty that is becoming more and more popular on this continent. As a matter of fact, I harvested my first crop during the current year. It is one of the simplest foods to cook. You prick the skin (it is the shape of a yellow football) with the tines of a fork, put the squash in a kettle of water and let it cook for 30 minutes.

When it is done, you scrape out the centre seeds and fibers and, finally, the edible strands, which are, of course, the "spaghetti" in the name.

One of the remarkable things about spaghetti squash is its nature as a table food.

I have eaten spaghetti squash simply buttered with a little salt and pepper added. Growers of the squash state that you can serve it with any sauce used for spaghetti and I'm inclined to agree. A family favorite is a simple tomato and meat sauce with assorted spices — marjoram, oregano, rosemary and pepper flakes — plus half a cup or so of red wine.

Since the spaghetti squash requires only half an hour to cook, there will be ample time to prepare the sauce and produce a meal in less than an hour. Serve the "spaghetti" and meat sauce with a tossed green salad.

SPAGHETTI SQUASH

1 medium-sized spaghetti squash, about 2½ pounds.

4 tablespoons butter.

Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste.

1. Pierce the squash in several places with the tines of a fork.

2. Place the squash in a kettle and add cold water to cover. Bring to the boil and cover. Simmer 30 minutes.

3. Hold the squash over a basin to catch all interior drippings. Cut the squash in half lengthwise.

4. Using a large, heavy metal spoon, scrape out and discard the centre section of each half much as you would clean a cantaloupe half. Scoop and scrape out the remainder of the squash, leaving only the shells.

5. Put the "spaghetti" strands into a skillet and add the butter, salt and pepper. Heat, tossing gently, until the strands are hot and coated with melted butter. Serve with meat sauce (see recipe).

MEAT SAUCE

1 tablespoon olive oil.

1 pound ground chuck.

1 tablespoon finely chopped garlic.

1½ cups finely chopped onion.

Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste.

½ cup dry red wine.

4 cups tomatoes.

¼ cup tomato paste.

1 teaspoon dried marjoram.

1 teaspoon dried oregano.

1 teaspoon dried rosemary.

⅛ teaspoon dried red pepper flakes.

1. Heat the oil in a heavy skillet and add the meat. Cook, chopping up the meat with the sides of a heavy metal spoon to break up any lumps.

2. When the meat loses its raw red look, add the garlic, onion, salt and a generous grinding of black pepper. Stir and cook about one minute.

3. Add the wine and cook until most of the liquid evaporates.

4. Add the tomatoes, tomato paste, marjoram, oregano, rosemary and pepper flakes.

5. Cook 30 minutes. Serve with spaghetti squash or pasta.

Yield: 4 to 6 servings.

question & answer

Rinsed veg' a better bet

Q. Most of the endive I buy in the supermarkets is snow white and seemingly free of soil. I am curious to know whether it should be rinsed before using.

A. In my own kitchen I generally cut it, rinse and pat or spin dry it before using but not necessarily for reasons of hygiene. After cutting it into bite-size pieces or thin julienne strips a good rinse in cold water will prevent the cut pieces from discoloring. If left to stand after cutting, the cut edges tend to darken.

Though I am assured that the endive as it is packaged is wholly clean, rinsing only takes seconds and doesn't damage the product. Still, there have been times when, in considerable haste, I have simply cut the endive into a salad bowl without further ado.

Q. Your instructions for recipes often say that a sauce should be reduced by one-half or cooked down to a cup or so. Most saucepans do not have measurement markings, which might not be a bad idea. But how does one determine when the sauce has cooked down to the desired amount?

A. The eye of a trained chef or cook will know within a spoonful or so the moment a sauce is properly reduced. Otherwise, if you want to be really exact, it will be necessary to pour the sauce into a measuring cup. In most cases, if you miss the cooking down time by a quarter of a cup or so, it isn't going to spoil the desired results.

Q. You frequently print recipes that call for browning meat and vegetables, which will then be cooked for two hours or longer and strained. Why do you go to the trouble of browning something that will cook for such a long time before serving?

A(Foods are browned before stewing, braising and so on for two reasons: Foods as they brown take on a welcome depth of flavor. The browning process also adds an appetizing color to the finished dish.

'Farm' good for lobsters

BODEGA BAY, Calif. (AP) — U.S. marine scientists say they have scored a breakthrough in research on "farming" commercial quantities of lobsters in captivity for hungry markets now subject to fickle nature for their supplies.

The scientists envisage commercial plants that would annually produce a million pounds of true, clawed lobsters to reverse the shrinking availability of the tasty creatures.

"We've taken what is essentially a wild animal and domesticated it," said Dr. Douglas Conklin, associated director of the aquaculture program at the University of California at Davis. He is in charge of 22 scientists at the Bodega Marine Laboratory, 72 kilometres north of San Francisco, working on one of the world's largest lobster projects.

Conklin talked to a reporter recently as he walked between rows of about 600 lobsters, moving energetically about their tanks.

"We're moving from a hunting stage in the ocean to a farming stage," said the 37-year-old scientist. The next step, he said, is to utilize breeding-system hardware developed in years of research to set up pilot plants.

Conklin said plans are under way to establish the pilots, at $2-million each, in Southern California and Maine. Each, he said, will test research technology under commercial conditions to produce 6,000 pounds of lobsters a year.

Conklin said the pilot equipment will include breeding systems, automatic feeding equipment, diet, water treatment and controls of temperature, light and disease.

He said a computer model set the lowest production cost for cultured lobsters at $2.24 a pound. The U.S. West Coast wholesale price exceeds $5 a pound in most places, while lobsters sell for as much as $25 a pound in Europe and Japan.

Some biologists have warned that ocean availability of lobsters may be so severely depleted some day that captive-bred versions will be the only source for them.

The U.S. lobster catch has remained fairly constant at about 30 million pounds a year since 1955, Conklin said, but cost of the catch has quadrupled — and so has the market price.

Thanks to the lobster's aggressiveness, only one in every 10,000 lobsters survives to adulthood in the ocean, while in the laboratory 95 per cent survive.

A big problem, Conklin said, is that the lobster's favorite food is lobster.

Conklin's team tested hundreds of artificial foods before they came up with a pellet composed of vitamins, soybean, milk protein, shrimptail muscle, beef liver and lecithin.

Charleston the set in play

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — An antidote to the post-holiday blahs is a colorful, unhurried look at Charleston, S.C., and the 1934 setting that inspired George Gershwin's American folk opera, Porgy and Bess.

To be seen tonight on CBC-TV, the hour-long show in the Spectrum series tells how the sophisticated up-tempo New York composer was introduced to the Afro-American rhythms and lifestyle that went into perhaps the only truly American work to have lasting popular appeal in the world of opera.

Porgy is based on a true-life black cripple, Samuel Smalls, who travelled the streets of old Charleston in a cart drawn by a goat, and was known as Goat Sam.

Gershwin was invited to the South Carolina Low Country and to Charleston by Dubose Heyward, one of the white aristocracy of the day who upset his social set by writing sympathetically about the local Gullah Negroes and their customs.

From a New York penthouse life, Gershwin adjusted to the lazy, easy days of a Charleston summer, living by the sea and watching the blacks at work, at church, and in their festive moods. From the experience came to story of Porgy and Bess and its music.

Neil Sutherland, whose productions in the last decade have dealt with composers ranging from Beethoven and Schubert to Franz Lehar and Noel Coward, wrote, directed and produced Gershwin and Porgy, using Heward's writings and Gershwin's music. Theodore Bikel appears as host, with Michael Spivak acting Gerswin and David Gardner as Heyward.

The 70s took their toll of Hollywood legends

scott's world

by vernon scott

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Hollywood bids adieu to the '70s, marking their passing as the decade of the two biggest box-office hits in movie history: "Star Wars" and "Jaws."

It was a 10-year span, too, which saw the passing of Hollywood legends — John Wayne, Mary Pickford, Bing Crosby, Jack Warner, Darryl Zanuck, Groucho Marx, Elvis Presley, Joan Crawford and scores of others.

The past year took its toll of such familiar names and faces as Jim Hutton, Jack Haley, Michael Wilding, Vivian Vance, Jean Seberg, Jack Soo, Merle Oberon and Jon Hall.

Death also claimed many stars of yesteryear: Pete Smith, 86, Marjorie Lawrence, 71, William Gargan, 73, Edgar Buchanan, 76, George Brent, 75, Jack Mulhall, 91, Ann Dvorak, 68, Ben Lyon, 78, Dolores Costello, 73, Gracie Fields, 81, Zeppo Marx, 78, and John Carrol, 72.

Weddings were few and far between among movie, TV and rock stars. But Rod Stewart and Alana Hamilton — George Hamilton's ex-wife — tied the knot, as did Debby Boone (Pat's daughter) with Rosemary Clooney and Jose Ferrer's son, Gabriel.

Liza Minnelli managed to get married and divorced in the same year. After her divorce from Jack Haley Jr. became final she marched to the altar to become the bride of Mark Gero, her stage manager.

Erik Estrada of the "CHiPs" TV series denied and then admitted his secret Las Vegas marriage to Joyce Miller. Estrada also survived a motorcycle accident which hospitalized him earlier in the year.

Teeny-bopper idol Shaun Cassidy, Shirley Jones' son got married.

Another second generation star, Desi Arnaz Jr., announced his engagement to actress Linda Purl. Their wedding will take place in 1980.

On the debit side of Cupid's ledger were several broken marriages and separations, including that of Farrah Fawcett who detached herself from husband Lee Majors.

Farrah's career took a nosedive in 1979 when her new movie, "Sunburn," bombed on the heels of her first film, "Somebody Killed Her Husband."

Now the blonde glamor girl of the 1970s is dating equally blond Ryan O'Neal, one of Hollywood's most eligible men-about-town.

Farrah has been replaced as Hollywood's leading sex symbol by 22-year-old Bo Derek, the nubile star of the hit comedy "10."

Clint Eastwood and his wife, Maggie, finalized their divorce and Clint has been steady-dating his favorite movie leading lady, Sondra Locke.

Sylvester Stallone, who had 1979's biggest box-office hit, "Rocky II," split from his wife, Sasha, and is dating Susan Anton.

Other marriages that bit the dust during the past year were those of George and Sherry Peppard, Kris Kristofferson and Rita Coolidge, and Tony Bennett.

The continuing saga of the Lee Marvin-Michelle Triola Marvin "palimony" trial finally came to an end with both sides claiming victory. Marvin did not have to pay his former live-in mate half his earnings during their liason but he was ordered to fork over $104,000 for Michell's rehabilitation.

One of the eeriest of the year's coincidences was the release of "The China Syndrome," the Jack Lemmon-Jane Fonda movie about an accident at a nuclear plant, shortly before the Three Mile Island nuclear near-disaster.

It was a booming year for Burt Reynolds who was voted the nation's No. 1 box-office star by theater owners, followed by Eastwood whose "Escape From Alcatraz" and "Every Which Way But Loose" ranked among the top movie attractions of the year.

But personal popularity of both stars did not affect the members of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences who voted Oscars to "The Deer Hunter," Jon Voight and Jane Fonda.

The movie that made the most news during 1979 was Francis Ford Coppola's "Apocalypse Now," a $36 million Vietnam war epic which is doing well but not spectacularly at the box office.

Biggest bomb of 1979 and perhaps in the history of motion pictures was Steven (Jaws) Spielberg's $32 million "1941," acclaimed as simply awful by most reviewers.

It was a whopping good year for new movies which promised a spirited Oscar campaign this spring.

In addition to "Apocalypse Now" were such winners as "Kramer vs. Kramer," "Manhattan," "Electric Horseman," "And Justice For All," "All That Jazz," "Breaking Away," "Chapter II," "Yanks," "Star Trek," "The Muppet Movie" and "The Black Stallion."

In television 1979 saw "60 Minutes" attain a top 10 Nielsen rating almost every week along with the total collapse of "Laverne and Shirley" which had been the most consistently rated No. 1 show for several years.

Soap op spinoff

NEW YORK — Soap opera, sometimes referred to as "daytime drama," has finally snared evening prime time's ultimate status symbol — a spin-off.

The primary source is "Dallas," a weekly saga about Texas millionaires that has attracted a generous parcel of ratings for CBS-TV. Now, beginning Thursday (10 p.m. EDT), also on CBS, there is "Knots Landing," a kind of middle-class offshoot set in a small but comfortable California housing development.

There are clear differences between these two series and ordinary soap operas. The prime-time budgets are considerably higher, enabling the productions to leave the studio for occasional on-location shooting. And the plotting is tighter.

Hydro boys get canny to head off brownouts

By PETER N. SCHUYTEN
New York Times

NEW YORK — It is the fourth day of a sweltering August heat wave in Detroit, and as the afternoon wears on, the demand for electricity begins to climb in tandem with the temperature and humidity. By 6 p.m., the Detroit Edison Co. finds itself with a peak load situation on its hands.

But instead of switching on the kind of expensive generator needed to meet excessive demand, the utility simply transmits a coded radio signal that selectively begins cycling, or turning off and on, some 200,000 electric water heaters in the homes of its customers.

There is a similar situation in Arkansas, where Arkansas Power and Light controls nearly 35,000 of its customers' air-conditioners, while the Southern California Edison Co. is avoiding brownouts by using remote-control signalling techniques to shut down some 28,000 home appliances within its system.

Indeed, the day is near when electric utilities across the country will routinely reach into their customers' homes to shut down appliances that make heavy power demands, such as air-conditioners and electric water heaters, during peak demand periods.

Residential load management, as the remote radio-control system is called, has been in use for more than a decade. In parts of Europe, particularly Britain, France, Italy and West Germany, the selective remote control of water heaters is very common. But until very recently most utilities in the United States have shunned the idea. After all, utilities are in the business of supplying power, not interrupting it.

The move toward such systems, however, is not so much a result of the oil and gas supply situation, although that has feen an indirect cause, to be sure. Rather, utilities are reacting to regulatory pressures, as public service commissions demand that the utilities justify rate increases through better control of their costs.

"Utilities are adopting these systems not necessarily willingly, but rather because the regulators are holding new rate increases over their heads," explains Frank M. Hyde, product line manager for Scientific Atlanta Inc.'s energy management division, a supplier of such systems for about three years.

Indeed, sheer economics, if nothing else, would seem to dictate such a move. Whereas installing a new tower plant costs upward of $1,000 a kilowatt, selective shutdowns, or load shedding, in the home cost about $100 a kilowatt.

Today, some 150 utilities (including B.C. Hydro) either are experimenting with such systems or have installed full-scale programs. "Four years ago there were only about e half-dozen," notes Wallace P. Miller, vice president of Motorola Communications and Electronics Inc.

Most of these programs are strictly voluntary on the consumers' part, but, according to regulators and power company executives, the day is not far distant when such controls in the home will be a mandatory condition of service.

In California, for example, where the peaks of summer electricity use are needle-sharp, the State Energy Commission recently pushed through legislation requiring utilities there to put some 8 per cent of all customers' air conditioners under energy management controls fy 1983.

For the most part, customer reaction appears to be positive. Edward A. Myers Jr., a Southern California Edison vice president, reports that only about 10 per cent of the company's customers have pulled out of the company's program, while 79 per cent of Arkansas Power end Light's volunteers reported they were not even aware when their air-conditioning was interrupted.

Although estimates vary, the market for such systems is said to be between $10 million and $15 million annually, but if more states begin following California's lead the handful of gompanmes thet make the equipment, feel the market could easily grow to $100 million by the mid-1980s.

In a typical system, a computer-controlled FM radio signal is generated and transmitted from a central location directly to an electronic device containing a receiver and decoder circuitry mounted on the water heater or air-conditioner.

In operation, the control box, which is installed and paid for by the utility, interrupts the appliance's thermostat circuit, inactivating it for a period of seven minutes. If after that time no further signal is received, the appliance comes on again.

In the Detroit Edison system, water heaters are typically switched off for seven minutes and on again for six minutes in peak periods, but cen be turned off for as long as four hours. Air-conditioners are typically cycled for seven minutes off, 28 minutes on.

Less common are systems that send radio signals to receivers mounted on the utility poles, which are then converted end sent along the power lines, or what is known as garrier current, into the home. This approach is economically suited to areas where there are clusters of homes using the controls.

While these systems meet a current critical need, that of smoothing out peaks in demand, such systems are just a few short steps away from the utility companies' long-talked-about dream of automatic meter reading.

"You can think of automatic meter reading as the second generation of this effort," says Miller of Motorola.

Indeed, a number of power companies are already experimenting with so-called "smart meters" that can talk back to the utility via telephone lines.

$688,680 pay for AMC chief

DETROIT (AP) — American Motors Corp. had such a good year that its top executive was given a bonus which more than doubled his salary, for a total [illegible]8,680, the company proxy statement says.

The statement released for the annual meeting disclosed that chairman Gerald Meyers was paid $328,680 in salary for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, as well as a bonus of $360,000.

In the previous year, his first as chief executive officer, Meyers got $228,520 in salary and a bonus of $175,000 for total of $403,520.

The bonus increases as profits rise.

Meyers also received $51,779 in fringe benefits last year.

AMC profits in its last fiscal year increased 129 per cent over the previous year.

The other companies did not do well.

Fire destroys gaudy mansion

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Fire early today destroyed the gaudy Sunset Boulevard mansion of a Saudi Arabian sheik who once shocked his neighbors by painting flesh tones on front-lawn statues of nudes.

The mansion's occupants, Sheik Mohammed al-Fassi and his wife, Sheika Dena al-Fassi, were not home at the time of the fire, officials said.

The fire was reported to have started in the east wing of the mansion, then spread to the second floor and the attic.

At least five hundred spectators gathered as flames and smoke poured from the building.

Gov't tapped opposition says S. Africa defector

PRETORIA (AP) — South African security officials have confirmed that one of their employees has defected to Britain with information one newspaper says may be "more politically explosive than the information scandal."

The employee, Arthur McGiven, alleged in an interview published last weekend in London that the South African national security department had used wiretaps against and read the mail of opposition political parties.

The newspaper said McGiven, 36, smuggled out department documents supporting his claims by wrapping them in a towel in his suitcase.

The documents are reported to show that the mail of many opposition politicians had been read and copied by security officials. Among those the security service had spied on was Helen Suzman, a widely-respected member of parliament for the Progressive Federal party.

"I am disgusted at this very grave invasion of privacy," Mrs. Suzman said. "To think that my private correspondence has been subjected to the prying eyes of shifty little men in government offices. I will take this up in parliament at the earliest opportunity."

The Rand Daily Mail in Johannesburg reported that McGiven planned to swap his information in exchange for asylum in Britain. His whereabouts was being kept secret.

It said the documents taken by McGiven might prove more damaging than the information scandal which eventually forced the resignation of former president John Voster. That scandal involved the illegal spending of millions of dollars in goverment funds to surreptitously influence world public opinion in favor of South Africa's white-minority government.

The London report said McGiven had been accumulting material for months to expose the new "total strategy" of Prime Minister P. W. Botha for eliminating communism in southern Africa. Botha's party has government South Africa since 1948.

Soldier kills own leader in ambush bid

BELFAST (AP) — A British soldier, laying an ambush for Irish Republican Army terrorists in the darkness of New Year's morning, accidentally shot and killed his squad leader and another member of his unit, security officials reported Monday.

Lieut. Simon Bates, 23, and Pte. Gerald Hardy, 18, were the first two victims of violent death in Northern Ireland in 1980. They were shot, apparently without being challenged, outside a village in the strongly pro-IRA County Armagh.

A police source said the soldiers were on foot patrol in southern Armagh, near the border with the Irish republic, when a soldier thought he saw something suspicious in the darkness and opened fire with an automatic rifle, killing his two comrades.

Police said that within the first 30 minutes of the New Year, the outlawed IRA struck twice, blowing up a shop and firing on police in Lisnaskea, County Fermanagh, and bombing a joint army-police post in Middletown, Armagh.

No one was injured, police said.

The fatal shooting of a 20-year-old man at his home in Belfast New Year's Eve wound up a year of 113 killings and brought to at least 1,994 the fatality total for more than a decade of violence in Northern Ireland.

The man's 60-year-old father was seriously wounded by the same, unidentfied assailants, police said.

Child torched to oust devil

NEW YORK (UPI) — A 20-month-old child was set on fire early today in an exorcism rite by his mother and grandmother who feared he was "possessed" by the devil, police said.

The child, Leon Justin, is in critical condition in the burn unit of New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center with second and third-degree burns over 90 per cent of his body. He was also malnourished, a hospital spokesman said.

Police said the child was burned in an "exorcism rite" by his mother Patricia Abrams, 25, and the child's grandmother, Lucia Abrams, in her 50s.

"God had told her that the baby was possessed," said a detective. "She said she was trying to get rid of the devil."

Neither woman had been charged early today in connection with the incident, which took place in the younger woman's low-income housing project apartment in Harlem.

The detective said he was told that before police and fire officials arrived, "The mother and Miss Abrams were naked in the place performing some sort of exorcism."

The two women told neighbors, "If you want to see the devil burn, come on in," he said.

The child's father, Leroy Justin, does not live in the apartment and was not present at the time. Miss Abrams' five-year-old son, who was not immediately identified, was in the apartment during the incident but was reported unharmed.

4,000 run amok on Reno streets

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Police have released almost all of the more than 100 persons detained following a New Year's Eve riot in which at least 18 persons were injured and businesses vandalized.

About 10,000 revelers had streamed to city streets to welcome the new year. Trouble broke out shortly after midnight Monday night and rioters ran amok for three hours, police said.

Police Lieut. Charles Nearpass, who described the riot as a "spontaneous combustion type of thing," said there was some looting and extensive property damage caused by the estimated 4,000 rioters.

Most of those detained by police were placed in civil protective custody for a few hours and released later in the day. But at least five others faced misdemeanor or felony charges.

Seven policemen suffered minor injuries and Reno hospitals reported treating 11 riot victims.

Steel strike hits already-shaky U.K.

LONDON (UPI) — Britain's state-owned steelworks shut down early today in the first nationwide steel strike since 1926, threatening widespread disruption of the nation's already shaky economy.

"The strike is on," said Bill Sirs, leader of the steelworkers union. "It is an impossibility to call it off. The only question now is how long it lasts."

An even more vital question was what effect it would have on industries like automobile manufacturing and shipbuilding, which are crucial to the economy.

Industry Secretary Sir Keith Joseph, a top policy adviser to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, warned the strike would be "extremely harmful."

But Joseph refused to intervene on the government's behalf. He said it was up to unions and management of the state-owned British Steel Corp. to settle their difference.

These were differences over pay.

British Steel, already losing some $2 million per day, first offered a pay increase of only 2 per cent, then boosted this to 6 per cent — plus another 10 or 11 per cent in local productivity deals.

Union leaders representing 90,000 iron and steel workers and 13,000 blast furnace men refused, sticking to a demand of a 20 per cent pay hike on top of the current average wage of about $240 a week.

The pay confrontation, however, followed announcement recently of sweeping cuts in steelmaking jobs — around 52,000 jobs are to go by August — and of wide-scale closures of loss-making steel plants. Unions bitterly oppose these plans.

The strike is the first all-out stoppage in the British steel industry since the general strike of 1926. Industrialists anticipated a long strike — perhaps six weeks or more. British Steel personnel director Philip Grieves agreed it could last as long as eight weeks, but said the steel corporation would not shift its position.

A prolonged shutdown will affect large sectors of British industry including the car industry, shipbuilding, engineering and food canning. Most firms said they had around four to six weeks supply of steel but faced difficulties if the strike lasts beyond January.

Joseph warned steel workers they will end up with even fewer jobs if the strike grinds on, and told them they will lose money by striking that they will never be able to recoup.,

But union leaders rejected last-minute appeals to call off the walkout and shut the furnaces down.

$3.45 price hike for Nigeria crude

LONDON (Reuter) — Nigeria has increased the price of its crude oil from $31.03 to $34.48 a barrel, Lagos Radio reported today.

The radio, monitored in London, quoted the managing director of the Nigerian National Petroleum Corp. as saying that the increase was intended to restore the competitiveness of Nigerian oil in international markets.

Nigeria does not supply oil to Canada.

A ministerial conference of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries in Caracas, Venezuela, last month did not to unify oil prices. Moderate OPEC members are charging $26 a barrel.

Front wants timing changed

Lord Soames welcomes guerrilla at assembly point

Times News Services

SALISBURY — Patriotic Front co-leader Robert Mugabe has moved up his plans to return to Rhodesia because of the growing difficulties surrounding the cease-fire, his chief representative announced today.

The official, Enos Nkala, demanded that British interim government authorities extend the cease-fire process to last six months.

At present, midnight Friday is the deadline by which black guerrillas must be in assembly camps supervised by British Commonwealth troops monitoring the cease-fire and an election lasting three days is to start Feb. 27.

Nkala, treasurer-general of Mugabe's Zimbabwe African National Union, told a news conference party officials asked Mugabe to hurry home to lead the fight for extending the cease-fire process.

Mugabe left Rhodesia clandestinely in 1974 and has been living in Mozambique. His patriotic front partner, the Zambia-based Joshua Nkomo, left in 1976 and is also expected to return this weekend to lobby for a ceasefire extension.

Both Nkomo and Mugabe are expected to run separately in the February elections for a new black-majority government paving the way for independence from Britain.

Nkala said the guerrillas' move to the assembly camps is going smoothly but slowly partly because they lack radios from which to learn about the arrangements.

He blamed cease-fire violations, such as infiltrations from Mozambique, on Rhodesian troops and militiamen impersonating guerrillas.

Fears for the cease-fire were heightened Tuesday with more than 60 incidents ranging from killings and setting of land mines to armed robberies and cattle rustling around the country.

British Governor Lord Soames responded by broadcasting a new appeal to the black guerrillas to quit fighting and report to the reception centres set up by British Commonwealth monitoring forces, where they are scheduled to remain until national elections in February install a black majority government.

The violence came as the British announced that the number of guerrillas in the Commonwealth outposts tripled overnight to 2,100 men, leaving an estimated 12,000 guerrillas in the bush. Out of the 39 reception camps set up to receive them, 22 were empty of guerrillas.

British sources blamed the surge of violence in the countryside to banditry rather than any guerrilla policy to defy the truce.

Soames sent Rhodesian security forces into action Tuesday, ordering them to pursue a band of black guerrillas that had attacked a white-owned farm.

In the first major clash of the truce, security forces tracked down 10 guerrillas who had been driven from the farm by the owner,and killed seven of the black nationalists in two skirmishes, a British spokesman said.

Informed sources said Soames had no intention of extending the time for guerrillas to assemble with their arms under the protection of British forces monitoring the cease-fire.

After the deadline, any armed men in the field will be considered outlaws and may be pursued by any forces, Rhodesian or Patriotic Front, at Soames' disposal.

Shah photos haunt Waldheim's Tehran trip

Times News Services

TEHRAN — A crowd of angry demonstrators protesting UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim's mission to Iran forced him to cancel a public appearance today after he and Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh met for three hours of "satisfactory" talks on the U.S-Iranian crisis.

An estimated 1,000 chanting demonstrators waited in vain at a building across the street from the foreign ministry. Waldheim was to have gone there to meet more than 100 people who said they had been crippled and tortured by agents of the deposed shah's regime but he stayed in his hotel room instead.

The demonstrators carried poster-sized photographs of Waldheim shaking hands with the ousted shah and kissing the hand of the shah's twin sister, Ashraf. "Waldheim's visit is a blow to our revolution," they chanted.

Tehran radio said that Ghotbzadeh described the outcome of his talks with the UN leader as satisfactory. "Waldheim has realized for the first time that Iran is extremely firm over its position," it quoted him as saying.

Meanwhile, the Iranian government moved part of its estimated $13 billion in foreign accounts from banks in Europe to other countries as a precaution against possible UN sanctions, said Ali Mavi-Rad, head of overseas finances for Iran's central bank. He did not say how much was moved.

The militants holding the American hostages at the U.S. embassy in Tehran vowed again today they would have nothing to do with the U.N. chief.

And at last report the secretary-general had not succeeded in getting the audience he requested with Islamic strongman Ayatollah Khomeini — probably the only man in Iran who can free the hostages, now in their 60th day of captivity.

Thousands of Afghan exiles shouting "Death to Brezhnev" stormed the Soviet embassy in Tehran, ripped down the hammer-and-sickle flag, and burned the banner to protest Russia's intervention in Moslem Afghanistan.

Elsewhere, an uneasy calm prevailed in the city of Sanandaj, where Kurdish guerrillas clashed with Khomeni's revolutionary guards Tuesday. Mortar rounds and rocket-propelled grenades were exchanged in the street fighting. The newspaper Bamdad said at least seven people were injured in the battle.

In the city of Tabriz, nine revolutionary guards seized six days ago in clashes with followers of Ayatollah Sayed Kazem Shariat-Madari have been released on orders of Shariat-Madari himself, according to press reports.

Waldheim is in Iran under a new UN Security Council resolution passed Monday to try to win the release of the hostages — put at 50 in number by the U.S. state department, 49 by their captors and 43 by three U.S. clergymen who visited them over Christmas.

If if he fails to get them freed by Jan. 7, as seems likely, the council will meet then to vote on a U.S. resolution now being drafted to impose limited sanctions against Iran.

In another development, the shah, in an interview with a British newspaper, was quoted as saying he was "coming round to accepting that he is answerable before some form of international tribunal," possibly at the UN.

The report said the shah stressed he would have to be sure that the hearing was impartial and that it would become a precedent, with heads of state of countries supporting or taking part agreeing they could be put on trial in the future if their successors demanded it.

In Beirut, Iranian religious leader Hojatoleslam Mohammed Montazari said today a contingent of Iranian volunteers has already arrived in south Lebanon to join the Palestinians in their "struggle" against Israel.

Crusty bettor L.A.-ys egg

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A man who bet Los Angeles would be destroyed by a major earthquake during the New Year's holiday period is $5,000 poorer today.

The Union Plaza Hotel accepted a $5,000 bet Dec. 21 from a man, described only as being "about 40."

He was given 70-to-1 odds and told the quake had to kill one million people and occur between noon Dec. 31 and noon Jan. 1.

Handicapper Bob Martin estimated the odds against such an event were about a million to one, said hotel spokesman Frank Maggio.

"Even the greatest prophets, including Nostradamus, didn't narrow their predictions down to one day," Maggio said. "But he paid for the bet with hundred dollar bills and some cashier's cheques."

The man, who stood to win $350,000 if the quake had struck, pocketed his receipt and walked out with his friends, Maggio said.

Earthquake devastates Azores isle

ANGRA DO HEROISMO (CP) — Most of this town of 17,000 lay in ruins Wednesday, shattered by a powerful earthquake in the Azores which killed an estimated 50 people and injured 400.

Portuguese President Antonio Ramalho Eanes flew to the stricken island of Terceira to survey the damage from the New Year's Day quake, the strongest to hit the mid-Atlantic islands for 20 years.

Official Portuguese figures put the confirmed death toll at 33, including seven children.

But U.S. Air Force officers at Lajes, 32 kilometres from Angra do Heroismo, reported that more than 50 people had died and about 400 were injured.

Brig.-Gen. Richard Drury, commanding officer at Lajes, issued a statement later saying that no U.S. servicemen or their families were harmed in the quake.

"We are all fine and we are pitching in to help our less fortunate Portuguese neighbors," Drury said.

The Portuguese government declared three days of national mourning for the earthquake victims.

Government press officer Antonio Lourenco de Melo said one of the injured described the quake as like "a very powerful bomb. Then all the buildings started crumbling".

In Angra do Heroismo, the island capital of Terceira, 70 per cent of the buildings, including many historical monuments, were reported destroyed. There was no electricity or water and many roads were impassable.

Communications with the island were difficult with only one police telephone reported working 24 hours after the quake. Anxious relatives crowded around it.

Man puts bite on the rats

WASHINGTON (AP) — More people in New York City are bitten by fellow human beings than by rats, a new study says.

People were blamed for 892 of the bites reported to the New York City health department in 1977, compared with only 229 bites from wild rats.

That put humans in third place among biters after dogs (22,076 reports) and cats (1,152). Other rodents, including squirrels and laboratory rats, caused several hundred other bites.

"Human bites are a serious medical and surgical problem," says the study in the latest issue of Public Health Reports, a monthly magazine published by the U.S. health department.

Nearly three-fourths of the human bites took place during some aggressive activity — fighting, mugging or resisting arrest. One-fourth of all bites were accidental, occurring during sports, rough-housing and the like.

Most people were bitten on the hands and fingers — 61 per cent — but 15 per cent were bitten on the head and neck, 12 per cent on the chest or other parts of the trunk and the rest below that.

Opening lead — queen of hearts.

You never know how much dynamite there is in a deal when you first look at your cards, sort them out, and start to bid.

Consider this hand played in a national team of four championship many years ago. I held the North cards and my partner was Sidney Silodor of Philadelphia. Nothing much occurred at our table, where the bidding went as shown and West led the queen of hearts.

Silodor won the heart lead with the king, cashed six diamonds and five clubs, and thus scored 490 points. We then went on to the next deal without giving the matter further thought.

When the same hand came to be played at the other table, where our teammates now held the East-West cards, the outcome proved to be altogether different.

At this table, South also got to three notrump. But the West player was the late and great Helen Sobel, and she wisely decided to make a neutral lead instead of the queen of hearts. She reasoned that a heart lead would probably cost her a trick — since South was likely to have the king — and she therefore led the eight of spades.

This unusual lead had an electric effect on the outcome. East enjoyed the lead immensely and cashed six spade tricks in a row. He then shifted to the ten of hearts and Mrs. Sobel duplicated East's totally unexpected success by cashing six heart tricks in a row.

As a result — even though the final contract at both tables was three notrump played by South — our team had the rare experience of winning twelve tricks with the North-South cards at the first table, and twelve tricks with the East-West cards at the second table. That's how championships are won!

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR
Astrological Forecast for Thursday, January 3, 1980

AIRES (March 21-April 19): You receive news which encourages change, travel and variety. Shake off any tendency towards lethargy. Imprint style, express self in meaningful manner. Take a stand — your popularity increases. Romantic interests are highlighted.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Emphasis on security, home, quality material and willingness to build on a more solid structure. Be meticulous, aware of details and alert to subtle signals. Libra, Scorpio, Leo persons figure prominently. Family member needs special attention.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Forces tend to be scattered — avoid trying to move in too many directions simultaneously. Relative who advises you could be sincere but misinformed. Know it and forge your own decisions. Pisces, Virgo natives figure in scenario.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Financial obligations, prospects come into focus. Accept challenge, responsibility and know that involvement is serious. Your position is strengthened by slow, deliberate action. Avoid rushing to judgment. Capricorn individual figures prominently.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Reach beyond current expectations. Cycle is high, your timing brings you to right place at crucial moment. You make valuable, new contact and burden is eliminated. Aries, Libra persons play key roles. Prestige rises, don't sell yourself short.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Mystery is solved: greater confidence replaces fears, doubts. Accent on temporary restrictions, special dealings with organizations, institutions and hospitals. You may be asked to represent special view before media. Leo person could be important ally.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You arrive at conclusions regarding friends, desires and emotional responses. Cancer, Leo, Aquarius individuals figure prominently. Learn by teaching, follow through on hunch and be receptive to opportunity for romance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Flurry of activity occurs in connection with career, dealings with superiors. You receive confusing messages from those in position of authority. Maintain balance, humor and be flexible. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure prominently.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Lunar aspects emphasizes pursuit of publishing, educational projects. Travel, language, rare spiritual insights are featured. Be willing to review, revise and rebuild. Aquarius, Leo, Scorpio persons figure in scenario. You could locate missing object.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Emotional commitment may be demanded by member of opposite sex. Accent on involvement, money and "mysterious dilemma." Solutions to problem comes through unorthodox sources. What appears to be "occult" becomes ordinary following thorough examination.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Reinforce legal position; be aware of public relations, partnership prospects and necessity for domestic adjustment. You gain most through diplomacy, display of quiet determination. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio individuals figure prominently.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Maintain low profile, avoid rocking the boat. Those who make grandiose gestures may lack substance. Know it and protect your interests. Refuse to give up something for nothing. One who care for you proves it with "tender regards."

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"John just bought a Rolls," said Roy. "Second-hand of course, but he claims it's like new."

Stan shook his head. "I'll buy that, but it must have cost him a fortune. Did he say how much?"

"Not exactly, but he put it this way," Roy replied. "It's a 5-figure amount in dollars, and if you multiply the digits you get 42 times their sum. He said it's the smallest 5-figure number that works that way."

How much?

Thanks for idea to Gerard Hayes, Mungret, Eire.

Just 'ducky' when birds select mates

PORTAGE LA PRAIRIE, Man. (CP) — Wildlife biologists have been frustrated for years in their attempts to get dwindling numbers of canvasback ducks to breed in captivity.

Finally, a PhD student at the Delta Waterfowl Research Station, just outside of Portage la Prairie, Man., says she has cracked the problem.

Canvasbacks will put up with an artificial breeding environment, said University of Minnesota graduate student Cynthia Bluhm, but they're not about to co-operate with attempts to boost their numbers unless they're allowed to choose their own mates.

"For canvasback ducks, social needs are very much more important than the physical environment you put them in," Ms. Bluhm said. "People know that for swans and some geese there's pretty substantial pair bonding. For canvasback ducks, people hadn't realized how important the pair bond is."

"This research goes against all of what people thought canvasbacks needed," she added.

Ms. Bluhm's work began to bear fruit two years ago when a few pairs nested successfully, and this year 49 of 50 pairs produced more than 350 ducklings.

The Delta Marsh flock is the only breeding flock of canvasbacks in captivity in the world, Ms. Bluhm said.

A threatened species under the American Endangered Species Act, and the only diving duck on the Autobon Society's "blue list," canvasbacks were once far more plentiful than other species of ducks.

However, a combination of over-zealous hunting, and loss of habitat, have reduced their numbers from millions before 1900 to a low of 385,000 in 1962.

Wildlife station director Peter Ward said canvasbacks use their strong necks, and long bills and tongues probe for the tubers of sago pondweed, and "there's no substitute for building body weight."

It's this very limited diet that makes the canvasback such "good eating" and "the most vulnerable to habitat loss and human encroachment," he said.

Once the canvasbacks let Bluhm know they wanted to choose their own mates — some of the females actually killed drakes chosen for them — Bluhm allowed the birds to mix freely in one of the station's enclosures.

As they paired, they were segregated into breeding cubicles and "things really came along. Individual recognition did make a difference," Bluhm said.

But out in the real world, it's a different story, and drakes fly south earlier in the fall than females who are left tending their broods.

"So the chances of them finding their mate down in Chesapeake Bay or the Gulf Coast of Mexico are pretty slim. They're not very likely to run into each other," Bluhm said.

Gardener on royal honors list

OTTAWA (CP) — Years of tending the gardens of Governors-General and prime ministers has blossomed for Arthur (Paddy) Johnston in the form of a personal decoration from the Queen.

"I've just heard the news, and it's thrilling," the 63-year-old native of Northern Ireland said from his home in Ottawa. His name was in the Queen's New Year's honors list annouced Sunday.

Johnston, the grounds supervisor at the Governor-General's Rideau Hall residence and 24 Sussex Drive, official residence for prime ministers, has worked on the properties for 25 years. He gets the silver Royal Victorian Medal.

"I have been introduced to the Queen and Prince Philip on many occasions during their trips to Canada," he said. Johnston last saw the Royal couple at a tree planting ceremony in 1977 at Rideau Hall.

Johnston, who came to Canada after the Second World War, recalls he "started from the bottom" as a groundskeeper with the National Capital Commission which supervises government property in the Ottawa region.

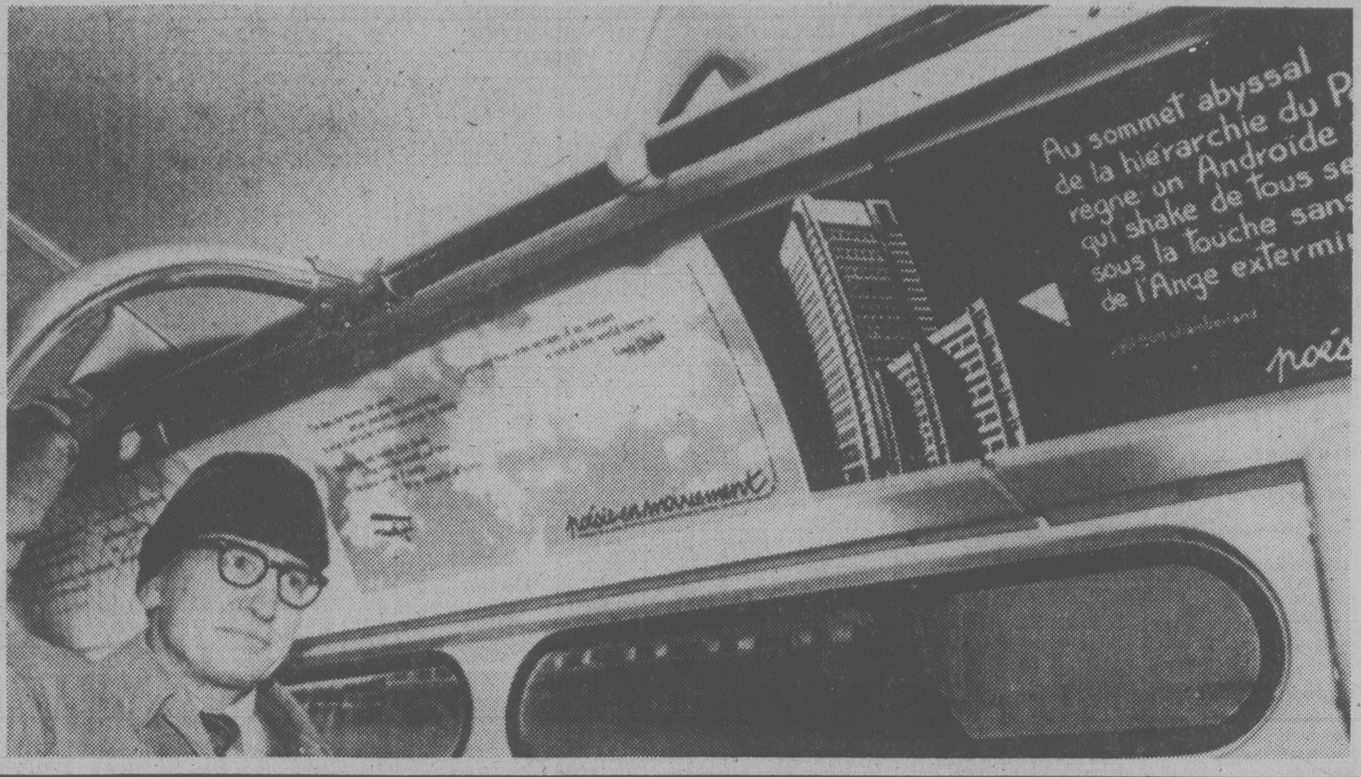
On the buses, it's poetry in motion



MONTREAL (CP) — The bra ads and the sumptuous supermarket come-ons that grace Montreal buses now have some unusual company — poetry.

"This is just great," says Louis Dudek, one of 20 poets whose work now is being carried on advertising panels on city buses.

"This way poets can reach larger numbers of people and maybe some of our phrases will stick in their minds."

The program, called Poetry on the Bus, is financed by a $7,450 grant from the Montreal arts council. The advertising space on 1,000 buses is donated by Trans-Public Advertising Co., which handles ads on the transit system.

"We attempted to find works that were relatively short so they would fit on the cards nicely with a good artistic display and something that everybody could understand," said Dudek.

308 CARDS OF THANKS

I would like to thank the many friends and all my family for the many offers of help and cards, during the sudden illness and passing of husband and father, Bill Watson. — Aileen Watson.

309 IN MEMORIAM

DAVIDSON - In loving memory of our dear Father Peter R. Jan. 2, 1978.
Memories are the pathways to the Happy Days we shared.
Always remembered by his loving daughters Jean & Ann and families.

GEARING — Desmond.
It is not that I am lonely for him . . .
I am mutilated, for he was part of me.
—In fond remembrance, Moreen.

RUELLE - In loving memory of Emile, who passed away January 2, 1979.
My Dearest Emile:
Life must go on I know thats true
But each day begins and ends with memories of you
To me you were someone special
A Husband so thoughtful and true
So very much loved and so terribly missed
Because my darling I thought the world of you
To those who have a husband
Cherish him with care
For you will never know the heartache
Till he's no longer there.
I miss you Emile with all my heart. And love you always, your loving wife Beth.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS

Shorty Powers dies

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Lt. Col. John A. "Shorty" Powers, NASA's one-time "Voice of Mission Control" who made the term "A-OK" a global byword, died alone in his secluded home Tuesday night, police reported Wednesday.

Powers, 57, who was retired from the Air Force, died of natural causes, police said. He recently had spent several days in a hospital for an undisclosed illness, the Maricopa County medical examiner's office said.

Powers originated the term "A-OK" during the early flights of the astronauts, and was also credited with popularizing the phrase, "All systems go."

Powers was appointed public affairs officer responsible for the original seven astronauts in 1959 and became so close to them he was often called the "eighth astronaut."

He once described his job with the astronauts as "the most exciting job I've ever had."

He left the space program in 1964 in a dispute over a remark he made at a news conference after the last Mercury shot was launched.

Interest on unpaid taxes 11%

OTTAWA (CP) — The interest rate charged by the federal government on overdue taxes increases Jan. 1, 1980 to 11 per cent from nine per cent, Revenue Minister Walter Baker announced.

The rate paid by the government to taxpayers receiving refunds also increases to 11 per cent, said a statement from Baker's office.

"The increase is intended to bring the interest rate closer to the rates of financial institutions," the statement said.

The new rate applies to all overdue taxes, including instalment payments, Canada Pension Plan contributions and unemployment insurance premiums.

Employers will also be charged 11 per cent interest if they fail to deduct income tax, Canada Pension Plan contributions or unemployment insurance premiers from their employees' salaries or to send the deductions to Revenue Canada. The current rate is 10 per cent.

Chinese pair executed for murder

PEKING (AP) — A firing squad has executed a divorced couple for beating a man to death, then chopping up his body.

The Peking Daily reported that Miss Liu Jingzhi and her ex-husband, Chen Kehao, were shot after the Peking intermediate court rejected their appeal from the death penalty imposed by a lower court.

CHLORINE THREAT similar to the one forcing evacuation of Mississauga, Ont., a month ago lies aboard barge Agattu which went aground Monday off rugged Pacific coast five kilometres west of San Francisco's Golden Gate Bridge. Work crews today prepared to hoist 35 one-ton canisters of liquified chlorine gas by helicopter from Agattu, which broke away from tug towing it to Hawaii in six-metre seas. Officials say the Agattu is also carrying 19 tons of explosives and corrosive chemicals that must be lifted off. Another barge that broke loose at the same time, the Kona, was carrying general cargo and is wrecked.

Transit top regional task

The biggest challenge facing the Capital Regional District in 1980 will be the takeover of public transportation.

"It will be the one central task this year," regional board chairman Jim Campbell said.

"It's going to need a great deal more work on the part of the directors, more than any of them imagine."

The provincial government has set April 1 as the date for the CRD and the Greater Vancouver Regional District to take over public transportation.

Campbell isn't certain the regional district will be able to take over at that time. He believes some kind of prior pledge must be given by the board that service in the northern and western sectors of the regional district will be improved following the take-over.

The provincial government has said the initial deficit will be met by a gasoline surcharge of three cents a gallon. In the second phase the deficit would be covered by extra B.C. Hydro charges and, finally, by increased property taxes.

Campbell agrees with the gas surcharge providing transportation services are improved.

Sidney mayor Norma Sealey, chairman of the CRD's transportion committee, disagrees, contending that increased property taxes are the fairest way to cover transportation deficits.

If the regional board fails to pass bylaws for the gas surcharge and hydro increases, there will be no alternative but to go straight to increased property taxes, Campbell said.

This useful gift will last all year

A New Year's gift to yourself or a gardening friend which will appear in your mail box monthly throughout the year is a three-dollar subscription to the Victoria Horticultural Society. The membership entitles you to the monthly issue of Garden Notes, compiled locally for local weather and soil conditions.

No publication can rightly claim to be "all about" or "all you need to know" but Garden Notes has indeed been a useful guide for local gardeners during the past 50 years.

Don't let the word "Horticultural" bother you; it just means gardening. Because the Society has been affiliated with the Royal Horticultural Society (England) throughout its history, it also carries the word in its title. Members are simply gardeners — amateurs and some more advanced, but all on the lookout for further knowledge about their hobby.

The $3 annual membership also entitles you to attend two outdoor fruit tree pruning demonstrations, usually in February, and two outdoor rose prunings, in late March or in April.

These are indeed learning experiences by seeing the practical work done at close range and with a running commentary by the demonstrator or an assistant. Questions can be asked and will be answered on the spot.

Within the society have been formed study groups which meet to talk about special interests among a dozen or 20 members. A list of groups: vegetable group; judging, rose; miniature rose; herb; geranium and pelargonium; heritage tree; cactus (and succulent).

As some small expenses arise in the groups, a nominal charge is made to each society member who joins a group; it may be 75 cents or one dollar.

You may be thinking of specializing in Dahlias, Gladioli or Chrysanthemums or Bonsai and wondering why groups are not listed for these interests. The reason is that separate societies have been formed, some 35 years ago, which also hold regular monthly meetings and flower shows each year.

The Victoria Horticultural puts on a summer show and fall show both offering opportunities not only to exhibit one's own flowers and vegetables but also to offer one's services in various capacities for the duration of a show in the show hall.

Opportunities also occur for members to hold office when the Society's annual election of officers takes place each November.

You may have a talent for the job of secretary, program director, show chairman, reporter of meeting talks, editor, compiling the show catalog, or other work within the society.

Any one of these offices opens the way for interesting contacts with the membership and with the public in general.

Meetings are held on the first Tuesday of each month (unless that day is a public holiday) at 7:30 p.m. in St. Mathias Hall, Richardson at Richmond.

The secretary's letter of society information (including date, time and subject of special speaker's talk) accompanies each issue of Garden Notes.

Also included are notices of all other meetings and events during the current month. Delivery is aimed at reaching local members the week previous to meeting date.

Membership Chairman is Mrs. P. Cameron, phone 592-4465. Call her for further information on sending in your subscription for membership. This is a non-profit organization so I have no hesitation in publicizing the Victoria Horticultural Society and its advantages.

Before the judge

Two men convicted of drinking-driving offences were given jail terms in provincial court Monday.

Bryan Ross Harrison, 31, was sentenced by Judge William Ostler to four months, to be served consecutively to a term Harrison is serving, and 20-year-old Joseph Paul Christian Pigeon was given a two-month jail term.

Crown counsel Nicholas Lang told the court Harrison was unlawfully at large when he was caught driving in Port Mellon.

Harrison was convicted on five previous occasions for drinking-driving offences: Feb. 13, 1972, in White Rock when he was fined $250; May 27, 1975, in Surrey when he was fined $400; Feb. 16, 1976, in Maple Ridge when he was fined $200; Jan. 12, 1978, in Hope when he was given a three-month term; and April 11, 1978, in Matsqui when he was jailed six months.

Defence lawyer James Main said Harrison was due to be released in May.

Pigeon was given concurrent sentences of 14 and 21 days, and two months for two counts of impaired driving and one count of breach of probation.

Lang said the first impaired charge was on Aug. 20 when Pigeon's van went out of control at 4 a.m. and went off the road after he drove away from the Junior Ranks Mess in Esquimalt. Subsequent readings of .23 and .21 were obtained, Lang said.

The second charge occurred Oct. 27 at 4:50 a.m. when a vehicle Pigeon was driving was involved in an accident on Wallace Drive in Central Saanich. Readings obtained were .22 and .20.

In connection with the breach of probation, Lang said Pigeon was convicted of impaired driving Jan. 2, 1979, and was fined $400 by Judge Blake Allan. The judge also imposed probation and ordered Pigeon to take the impaired drivers' course.

Lang said dates in June were set up for Pigeon to take the course but he phoned to say he couldn't make the first two nights. Subsequent dates were arranged but he missed again, Lang said.

Defence lawyer Robert Salmond said Pigeon was leaving the Canadian Forces Jan. 11 because of his drinking problem and the reason he missed the court-ordered course was that he was attending a course on alcoholism given by the forces.

Ostler said it is a sad case of a bright, intelligent person with a bright future in the services wrecking his career because of alcoholism.

A 19-year-old who failed to obey a court order to stay away from a young woman was fined $200 and given a warning by Ostler.

David Patrick Dale Rix, 2799 Wenger Terrace, pleaded guilty to breach of a recognizance.

Court was told Rix was ordered to stay away for one year from Bernard, Barbara and Dorothy O'Leary following a fear-of-injury hearing Nov. 28.

On Dec. 28, Lang said, Rix was in a vehicle which was passing the front of The Bay when he saw Barbara O'Leary. Rix got out of the car, walked up to the woman and threatened to kick and injure her, Lang said.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were Robert Edward Hobbs, 22, of Wainwright, Alta., $400, and Kurt Paul Heinrich, 21, of Calgary, $450.

In addition, Hobbs was fined $150 for refusing a breath test demand made by Saanich police.

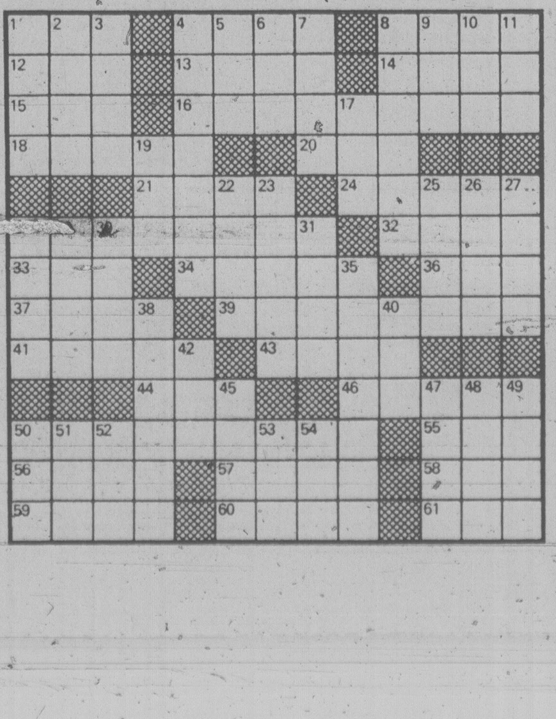
Answer to Monday's puzzle.



S. Africa A-blast only answer: panel

By THOMAS O'TOOLE
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A board of outside experts named by the White House to decide whether an atomic explosion took place near South Africa on Sept. 22 has ruled out almost every other explanation for the event.

In a meeting convened by the White House Office of Science Policy just before Christmas, the panel of seven unidentified experts concluded there was no reason to suspect that the Vela satellite which spotted the Sept. 22 event had malfunctioned, or that what the satellite saw was caused by an enormous strike of lightning, as another theory suggested.

"The signal the satellite saw still looks in every way like a nuclear explosion in the atmosphere," one White House source said. "The trouble is, we still have absolutely no separate data that would corroborate that it was an atomic explosion."

The most solid such data would be radioactive fallout from the explosion, which took place (if it was an explosion) in the middle of the night Sept. 22 above a wide expanse of the South Atlantic and Indian oceans. The nearest country to the source of the explosion was South Africa, which led to speculation that the South Africans had exploded their first atomic bomb.

Late in November, New Zealand thought it had detected fallout in its rainwater, but officials retracted that statement shortly thereafter, saying they could not be sure.

Some scientists suggested the Vela satellite had made a mistake, either by malfunctioning or mistaking a "superbolt" of lightning in the clouds above the ocean for a nuclear explosion. The panel convened by the White House was asked to look carefully into each possibility.

White House sources said the panel concluded the satellite was in excellent working condition. Each time the satellite was interrogated from the ground, the sources said, it returned the correct information. What's more, the satellite has never repeated its Sept. 22 observation, suggesting it saw a real event in the skies near South Africa that night.

The lightning superbolt was described as "unlikely," because its signature is nothing like what was written in the sky the night of Sept. 22.

What the satellite saw was a double pulse of light that is the characteristic fingerprint of a nuclear explosion, in which a fireball briefly disappears when the shock wave makes it opaque from space, then reappears when the wave dissipates.

The panel has also concluded that a lightning strike quickly followed by a meteor burning up in the atmosphere does not explain the event of Sept. 22. Said one White House source: "The statistical chance of that happening got bad very quickly once we started looking at it."

Despite the evidence that an atomic explosion took place Sept. 22, the White House has not disbanded its panel of seven experts. The White House will convene the panel at least once more after it has researched even the remote possibility that the Vela satellite may have mistaken a double glint of sunlight off another satellite.

Pontiff raps missile buildup

SHERRY LANSING, senior production executive for the movies China Syndrome and Kramer vs. Kramer, is the new productions president at Twentieth Century-Fox. The appointment of Lansing, 35, was the latest in a number of top level changes at Fox since the departure of Alan Ladd Jr. as president of the film division last July. Lansing recently left Columbia Pictures and replaces Sandy Lieberson, who resigned last month.

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul on Tuesday condemned the reported buildup of sophisticated missiles in Europe and warned of the "terrible nightmare" of nuclear war.

In his strongest criticism to date of the missiles, the 59-year-old head of the Roman Catholic Church said the recent decision "to pile up many means of destruction in the cradle of civilization was forced the people to look toward the future with anxiety."

"They (means of destruction) could destroy the fruits of this rich civilization . . . reducing cities and villages to a pile of rubble," he said.

Although he did not make any specific reference to countries, Vatican sources said the pontiff probably referred to both a reported Soviet missile buildup and a corresponding decision by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization to go ahead with a modernized nuclear missile system in Western Europe.

The pope spelled out — quoting unnamed scientists — the "immediate and terrible consequences" of nuclear war which, he said, can wipe out 50 million to 200 million people and cause genetic mutations.

He told an audience of 20,000 faithful at a New Year's mass at St. Peter's Basilica that "the people around the world must be told of the terrible nightmare a nuclear war can bring.

"Nuclear war will cause a drastic reduction in food resources, spreading radioactive residue over areas of arable land and bring about substantial alterations in the atmosphere's ozone layer, exposing man to great unknown perils," the Pope said, quoting the scientists.

Two hundred of the more than 50,000 nuclear bombs existing in the world today would be sufficient to destroy most major cities around the globe, he said.

On Monday, the Pope denounced terrorism and the arms race as casting an "evil threat" over the new year. "The evil that exists in he world, that surrounds us and that threatens man, nations and mankind seem to be bigger, far bigger than the evil for which each of us feels personally responsible," he said.

Bloody start

NEW YORK (AP) — Less than four hours after ending its most murderous year ever, New York City began recording its bloodiest New Year's Day in history. Twelve persons were killed, including a pregnant teenager who was shot to death in a dispute over where she should sit at a party.

Ford recalls cars, trucks

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. says it is recalling 3,000 cars to replace brakes that are too small and about 80,000 light trucks to repair a defective transmission.

But the truck defect — which could cause the transmission to fail to lock in park — has "absolutely nothing to do" with the possible recall of nine million cars with automatic transmissions that critics have alleged can slip out of park, a Ford official said Monday.

The cars named in Monday's announcement, Ford Thunderbirds, Mercury Cougar XR-7s, Ford Fairmonts and Mercury Zephyrs from the 1980 model year, received rear brake drums intended for the smaller Mustang.

The drums are one-sixteenth inch smaller in diameter than they should be. As a result, the cars do not meet U.S. government standards for stopping distances "by a few feet," said the Ford official, John Emmet.

The trucks — Broncos, vans and F-series pickups from the 1980 model year — have transmissions with parking pawl actuating rods with defective welds, Emmet said.

As a result, pushing the lever into the park position might not lock the transmission, and the truck could roll free. It might also be possible that some transmissions could be locked permanently in park.

He said Ford has no reports of accidents or injuries from the brake and truck transmission problems.

Quake experts monitor water for answers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Large-scale removal of ground water may be causing sections of the southwest United States to lift up, and it also could possibly trigger earthquakes, a U.S. Geological Survey scientist said today.

Dr. Thomas Holzer, a geologist at the survey's western region research centre in Menlo Park, Calif., said the pumping out of ground water could be causing sections of land surfaces to be uplifted in parts of Arizona, California, and Texas.

He said ground water extraction may have a more significant effect than previously realized on land surface stability.

"For example, the cumulative effect of long-term substantial ground water depletion conceivably could trigger earthquakes in some tectonically active areas," Holzer said.

"At this early stage in our investigations we cannot yet pin down any clear-cut cause-and-effect relationships between earthquakes and pumping, but our data and understanding of geophysics supports such speculation."

Holzer said in south-central Arizona near Casa Grande, midway between Tucson and Phoenix, "at least 2.5 inches of uplift seems to have occurred from 1948 to 1967, and, if real, the movement is probably related to ground water withdrawal."

Other areas of probable expansion and uplift are the Southern High Plains of Texas and the agriculturally rich San Joaquin Valley of California.

The geological survey said previous studies have shown that large-scale removal of ground water is linked with sinking or subsidence of land surfaces.

Holzer said such sinking is generally limited to the upper several hundred feet.

Mecca siege tips big Saudi shuffle

RIYADH (AP) — King Khaled appointed new commanders for Saudi Arabia's armed forces today in a shakeup reflecting dissatisfaction with the way the army handled the attack on Mecca's Grand Mosque last month.

Royal decrees broadcast over the state radio named Maj.-Gen. Mohammed as-Saleh Hammad chief of staff, Maj.-Gen. Abdel Majed ali Amran commander of land forces, and Maj.-Gen. Mohammed Sabri commander of the air force.

Another decree named the commander of the border corps, Gen. Abdul Rahman el-Sheik, as chief of internal security forces.

Other significant news was that Prince Fawaz bin Abdul Aziz, 48, had resigned as mayor of Mecca.

Cornish oil spill killer

LONDON (AP) — Hundreds of seabirds smothered in oil were dying today along the north Cornwall coast at the southwest tip of England.

Wildlife rescuers said they picked up cormorants, gulls and other birds from badly polluted beaches along a 40-kilometre stretch of the coast between St. Agnes and Port Isaac.

Residents said it was the worst pollution since the Torrey Canyon disaster in 1967, when the Royal Air Force had to bomb the grounded tanker to reduce pollution.

LIBRARY SHAMBLES at Lambrick junior high is surveyed by school maintenance employee Alf Lohr. Vandals caused an estimated $5,000 damage when they went on rampage at school. Police said 24 windows were shattered, the library and offices were vandalized and sections of the playing field were chewed up by a car. Intruder alarm went off about 2:30 a.m. but when police arrived, the vandals had fled. School board officials said clean-up and repair work will allow school to open Monday.

Nearly 3 times normal — unionists fear worst

Severe winter layoffs have hit the forest industry in the B.C. interior and on southern Vancouver Island things are just starting to pick up after a longer than usual Christmas holiday shutdown.

Clay Perry of the International Woodworkers of America headquarters in Vancouver, said as of New Year's Eve, 11,500 forestry workers had been hit by layoffs.

He said the average number of workers idled by seasonal layoffs in B.C. is about 4,000.

"It's much worse than we predicted before Christman," Perry said. "Unless something substantial is done it is going to get a hell of a lot worse."

He said mills which normally shut down for six weeks have been forced to close for 12 weeks or longer.

On Vancouver Island, the 5,000-member Duncan local appears to be worst-hit.

President Roger Stanyer said most of the sawmills in his area — covering the Malahat to Parksville — re-opened today but some 40 per cent of the local's members are still off the job.

The layoffs this winter started a week to 10 days earlier, around mid-December, and for some woodworkers there's no firm return to work date.

Few loggers are back at work yet, said Stanyer.

Victoria IWA president Roger Lewis, whose Local 118 covers north to the Malahat and out to Jordan River, said today about 700-800 forest workers of a total local membership of 1,800, are still off the job.

"Some of our people we understand may be going back next Monday," he said.

"Some of them were supposed to go back on the second while others will be going back on the seventh."

Victoria-area sawmills checked by the Times today were all back in production although Victoria Plywood Ltd., which laid off 200 employees Dec. 21, is still not back in production.

Last winter it started up again Jan. 15, and hired back a second shift Feb. 5. But this year there is still no definite start-up date.

"It's kind of in limbo at the moment," said a company spokesman. "It doesn't look too swift."

B.C. Forest Products Ltd. on the Gorge had a partial layoff of 270 people but will be starting full operations again on Monday.

"Most of the employees had holidays coming," said a company official today.

Plumper Bay Sawmills Ltd. closed on Dec. 20 but all 90 employees are now back on the job.

Out in Sooke, although the company has curtailed some operations, all 250 workers laid off before Christmas have now been called back.

Lewis estimates about 300 loggers in the Victoria local are still idle.

Meanwhile, IWA officials say the two-week-old B.C. Rail strike, which has sidetracked shipments of lumber, pulp, coal, potash and sulphur, has not yet contributed to the problem.

They blame high interest rates which have cut into the U.S. and Canadian housing markets, main consumer of finished lumber from Interior B.C. mills.

Gold zooms to $567

LONDON (AP) — Gold soared $43 to $567.50 a troy ounce ($652 Canadian) today in the biggest advance ever seen in a single day's trading. Silver price increased $8 an ounce.

The buying fever was attributed by dealers to the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan and the continuing Iranian crisis.

"There's no limit in sight," said one London dealer when gold hit $562. On Monday, before the New Year's holiday, gold had closed in London at $524.50.

Silver rose to a record $40 from $32 at Monday's close. "It's very, very difficult to see anything turning this market now — there's a distinct lack of sellers," said a dealer at Sharp Pixley Ltd. in London.

Gold analyst Brian Edgly of investment experts Bache Halsey Stuart Shields of London, said the price may hit $600 within the next few days. But he also cautioned that good news — about oil supplies or the U.S. embassy hostages in Iran — might cause a sharp setback in prices.

The Paris Stockbrokers' Association halted gold trading because of massive buying orders and virtually no sellers, which sent bids up to $565.80 an ounce. There is a government sales tax of four per cent on gold trading in France, which traders automatically add to gold prices. The government has proposed raising the tax to six per cent.

Australian bullion expert Ian Shannon predicted today that gold will reach $750 an ounce within three months, even with a settlement of the Iranian crisis.

"If it is solved by war then the price will assuredly jump," he said. "And, if there is a peaceful solution it will mean that Iran will then want to transfer its $10 billion worth of assets frozen by the United States into other currencies, at least to save face."

The U.S. dollar, meanwhile, sank against most currencies.

$622,000 accident award

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Calgary man left a quadraplegic after a diving accident last summer in the Okanagan has been awarded $622,000 for his injuries.

Mr. Justice H. E. Hutcheon of the B.C. Supreme Court overruled a jury's award of $11,000 made earlier in December.

The jury had decided that Terry LeBlanc, 28, who was suing the City of Penticton, was 95 per cent to blame in the accident, and assessed total liability at $225,000, meaning LeBlanc would receive only about $11,000.

LeBlanc broke his neck and severed his spinal cord when he dived off a raft in Skaha Lake last Aug. 4. The raft, about 100 metres offshore, was in water 1.5 metres deep.

Hutcheon ruled Wednesday that the city was 60 per cent responsible for the accident, and assessed $1,036,088 as total damages.

Man in custody, toll 43 after nightmare Que. fire

CHAPAIS, Que. (CP) — The death toll after a fire which turned a New Year's Eve party into a nightmare rose to 43 today after one of the 50 injured died in a Quebec City hospital.

Names of the victims were not released.

District Coroner Gilles Hudon said today that an inquiry, headed by Quebec fire commissioner Cyrille Delage, is to open Jan. 14, at the courthouse in nearby Chibougamau.

A provincial police spokesman said Florent Cantin, 21, a resident of this northern Quebec mining town, appeared before Delage in a closed session today in Chibougamau before being transferred to Orsainville provincial prison near Quebec City.

Cantin, held since Tuesday as a material witness, remained in custody on a coroner's warrant.

Corporal Yvon Martel, heading the police investigation, said Cantin was being moved for his own protection.

"Our jails in the district here are small, and some of the other prisoners might be revolted by him."

Delage, who flew in from Quebec City earlier today with provincial pathologist Richard Authier, then headed for Chapais to consult with municipal officials at the town hall, inspect the Opemiska Club — the scene of Canada's worst building fire in more than 40 years — and visit a temporary morgue set up in the town garage.

Most of the victims of the fire were found in a grotesque heap of charred bodies four feet high just inside one of the two rear exits to the hall where the crowd rushed after flames broke out near the front door.

Survivors said that at first the booming disco music made many of the 200 to 300 party-goers take the fire lightly.

But Sgt. Alfred Fillion of Quebec provincial police said six of the dead were found outside the hall. They were trampled to death as the fear-stricken crowd fought its way out of the smokey hall.

One indication of the mob panic was the discovery of scratch marks that Fillion said police found on the exit door and walls near the heap of bodies.

Girl dies in crash

A 17-year-old girl became Greater Victoria's first traffic fatality of the New Year early today.

Saanich police said Kathleen Ann Cameron of 2224 Edgelow died in Royal Jubilee Hospital at 2:20 a.m., 40 minutes after a jeep in which she was riding slammed into a light standard at McKenzie near Oakwinds.

A police spokesman said driver Philip Minns, 19, of 3385 Whittier, Cameron and another passenger, Steve de Girolamo, 21, of 4014 Cedarwood, were all thrown to the road.

Minns and de Girolamo are in fair condition in Jubilee with head, leg and internal injuries.

Last year 36 persons died in traffic mishaps in Greater Victoria.

Times News Services

The United States and its five major Western allies have agreed in London to seek United Nations action as soon as possible against the Soviet Union's invasion of Afghanistan, which they characterized as "naked aggression."

After a hastily arranged, six-hour meeting here with senior diplomatic representatives of Britain, West Germany, France, Italy and Canada, U.S. Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher said they agreed to bring "this flagrant violation of international law" to the attention of the UN.

Diplomatic sources would not reveal, however, whether any of the other allies would join the United States in trying to provide emergency military aid to Pakistan, a possibility which has alarmed India. Nor would they say whether the allies discussed the possibility of aiding the Afghani Moslem rebels, many of whom are based just across the border in Pakistan.

Christopher, who flew here Sunday night for Monday's talks, left immediately afterwards for Brussels, where he planned to hold similar consultations with the rest of the NATO allies at an emergency session of the North Atlantic Council Tuesday.

Meanwhile, Soviet-installed Afghan leader Babrak Karmal warned today he would ask Russia for more military help to supplement the estimated 50,000 Soviet troops already in his country, Radio Kabul reported.

There were unconfirmed reports in New Delhi and Peshawar that Soviet soldiers battled Afghan opposition forces at a point about 96 kilometres from the Pakistani border.

The reports said the Soviets had secured the Afghan capital of Kabul and have moved out to secure the central Asian country's only major road network.

The reports also said the Soviet troops mortared and bombed major telegraphic switchboards and govern-

Marathon fever strikes Victorians of all ages

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY

About 200 Victorians, some bleary-eyed and tired-looking, wandered into the YM—YWCA auditorium New Year's Day to learn how to prepare for a marathon.

Husbands decked out in flashy new sneakers and Christmas-present track suits sat with their kids while senior citizens wondered how to stretch pension cheques to cover the costs of proper running gear.

Marathon fever has struck Victoria.

The big turn-out for the two-hour lecture on sports medicine that preceded the Y's annual fun run to Clover Point, delighted and surprised officials.

While the experts talked about nutrition, warmup exercises and selecting the right shoes, the $5 Royal Victoria Marathon training manual and official T-shirts were selling like hotcakes at the back of the room.

Officials said 200 manuals have been sold and they expect more sales once word of the Sept. 20 marathon spreads.

The marathon — Victoria's first officially sanctioned long-distance event — is being supported by the Victoria Times and radio station *VI*90*.

The object is to get as many people, not just athletes, involved as possible.

Organizers promise that anyone who follows the nine-month training program faithfully and attends the Sunday marathon clinics at the Y will be able to complete the 26 mile, 385 yard course that loops twice along the Victoria waterfront from Beacon Hill Park to Willows Beach.

Dr. Norgrove Penny told the group that the program is designed to help anyone run a marathon "whether you've run 20 marathons before or never put on a pair of running shoes in your life."

Penny, a runner and cardiologist, assured the audience the anti-running movement that has surfaced recently is wrong in its criticism of the sport.

He said virtually all injuries resulting from the overuse syndrome — too much, too [illegible] are not serious.

Kneecap problems — stress fractures, shin splints and achilles tendon — disappear with rest and therapy and, contrary to opinion, running does not cause arthritis, Penny said.

Most common causes of injury are improper training techniques, failure to do the proper flexibility and strengthening exercises that go along with running, wearing the wrong footgear and anatomical problems that can be corrected by shoe inserts.

Most medical conditions benefit greatly from running and it is now accepted therapy for psychological states like severe depression.

People can start running at 70 if they train properly.

Women physiologically adapt to running much better than men, said Penny who told the group he is looking foward to the day a woman wins the Boston Marathon and maybe even the Olympics.

Penny irked some of the athletes in the room when he said football players and weightlifters are not fit.

Real fitness, he explained, can only be achieved through endurance sports.

While the experts talked about nutrition, warmup exercises and selecting the right shoes, the $5 Royal Victoria Marathon training manual and official T-shirts were selling like hotcakes at the back of the room.

Officials said 200 manuals have been sold and they expect more sales once word of the Sept. 20 marathon spreads.

The marathon — Victoria's first officially sanctioned long-distance event — is being supported by the Victoria Times and radio station *VI*90*.

The object is to get as many people, not just athletes, involved as possible.

Organizers promise that anyone who follows the nine-month training [illegible] fully and attends the Sunday marathon clinics at the Y will be able to complete the 26 mile, 385 yard course that loops twice along the Victoria waterfront from Beacon Hill Park to Willows Beach.

Dr. Norgrove Penny told the group that the program is designed to help anyone run a marathon "whether you've run 20 marathons before or never put on a pair of running shoes in your life."

Penny, a runner and cardiologist, assured the audience the anti-running movement that has surfaced recently is wrong in its criticism of the sport.

He said virtually all injuries resulting from the overuse syndrome — too much, too fast — are not serious.

Kneecap problems — stress fractures, shin splints and achilles tendon — disappear with rest and therapy and, contrary to opinion, running does not cause arthritis, Penny said.

Most common causes of injury are improper training techniques, failure to do the proper flexibility and strengthening exercises that go along with running, wearing the wrong footgear and anatomical problems that can be corrected by shoe inserts.

Most medical conditions benefit greatly from running and it is now accepted therapy for psychological states like severe depression.

People can start running at 70 if they train properly.

Women physiologically adapt to running much better than men, said Penny who told the group he is looking foward to the day a woman wins the Boston Marathon and maybe even the Olympics.

Penny irked some of the athletes in the room when he said football players and weightlifters are not fit.

Real fitness, he explained, can only be achieved through endurance sports.
